Board Says Need of $57,500
is Due to Cuts in Original Appropriations

Juggling of Funds Necessary to Feed Horses in Ash
and Waste Departments

In a letter addressed to the mayor today the board of public service advises him it will need a supplementary appropriation of $57,500 to complete the 1924 work of departments
under its control.

The letter, signed by Dennis J. Murphy, chairman of the board, states that $57,500 additional is necessary because of cuts made in original budget estimates in the matter of street department wages and also because no proper provision was made in the estimates for caring for horses in the ash and waste division. New horses also have been purchased and it was found necessary to expend $1500 for a new street cleaning machine.

Letter to the Mayor

Chairman Murphy's letter, delivered to the mayor's office shortly after noon today, follows: "Your letter of July 30th, addressed to me, as chairman of the board of public service, received. I presented your letter to the board of public service and after several conferences on the matters contained in your letter, I desire, on behalf of the board,
to report as follows: First, I believe the street department will need a supplementary budget as follows:

"In the matter of salaries and wages, in street maintenance, the board originally asked for $293,423.50
and were finally appropriated $256,- 770.77, making a reduction of $36,- 652.73. The demands for street repairs and maintenance are constant and must be attended to, and your board feels and believes that if complaints are to be attended to and streets repaired, the street department will need, for the balance of the year, the sum of $28,000. In the matter of supplies and materials connected with the street maintenance program, the department will need
the sum of $20,000. The current expenses for materials and supplies will average $5500 per month and with six months to go will amount to $33,000.

There will be an additional sum of $4000 for new horses, delivered but not yet paid for, this makes a total of $37,000. There is a balance, now on hand to the credit of the department amounting to approximately $17,000, which will meet an additional sum of $20,000.

In the ash and waste department,
there will be needed $10,000 for material and supplies and for new horses, bought and not paid for. Last year, the horses of the ash and waste department were maintained at a cost of $20,000.

AUTO LAW VIOLATORS IN DISTRICT COURT

Three violators of the automobile laws were fined $10 each in district court this morning. Charles H. Morrison of Ayer, a taxicab driver, was fined $10 for operating without a certificate of registration in his possession, and M. Smith was fined a like amount for failure to have his license with him. A fine of $10 was imposed on William L. Wilson for operating a car which had defective brakes. A fourth offender against the motor vehicle laws, Costas Rhangos, charged with going away without making himself known after an accident, was continued until tomorrow.

Nelson Cassette of Nashua, charged with operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor, pleaded not guilty and was continued until Aug. 15. Mathias Phillips, who was with him at the time of his arrest and was charged with drunkenness, was continued to the same date.

Mary McCluskey and Annie Tibbatts,
ness complaints, were given suspended sentences to the women's reformatory.
George M. Crowe, a stubborn child, was

CONDITON AT HOSPITAL

Was Seriously Injured in Automobile Accident in West
Chelmsford—Three High School Girls Also Injured—
Driver of Car Only One to Escape Injury

As result of an automobile accident
in West Chelmsford at about 10 o'clock last night, Edward Sinnott, aged about 18 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard A. Sinnott, 27 Fairfield street, is in a very critical condition at St. John's hospital. His major injury is a fractured skull and early this afternoon he had not regained consciousness.

Three Lowell high school girls, passengers in the machine, who are at the hospital with injuries that are not serious are: Myrtle Bigelow, 167 School
son, 238 Butman road, bruises and lacerations, and Jean Palmer, 239 West-worth avenue, slight face abrasions.
The driver of the car, William Milne,
143 Westford street, escaped injury.
The machine is owned by his father,
Fred H. Milne.

The Milne car was returning from Lake Nahassett to Lowell and was between West and North Chelmsford
when a man on a bicycle was seen on the road just ahead. Milne attempted to pass on the left of him, but when the bicycle swerved in the same direction, he was forced to swing sharply
to the right and ran off into soft sand
on the side of the road and overturned.

Persons living nearby assisted in righting the car and caring for the injured young people until the ambulance from Lowell arrived, when they were taken to St. John's hospital.
G. Buel Palmer, father of the Palmer girl, who was slightly injured in the accident, said today that the families of the young people knew of their whereabouts last night and had allowed them to go in the Milne car for a ride as far as Lake Nahassett and return.

BOSTON ALIENIST SAYS LOEB AND
LEOPOLD MENTALLY DISEASED

Matter of Which Boy Struck Fatal Blow With Cold
Chisel Remains Puzzle of Trial—Dr. Healy Says
He Did Not Know Which One Killed Franks Boy

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dr. William Healy of Boston, second psychiatrist, testified for the defense at the hearing to determine punishment for Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, Jr., for kidnaping and murdering Robert Frank, testified today that the crime
was "the direct result of Loeb's diseased motivation," and that the observation of the youths in the courtroom had confirmed his opinion from examinations that they are mentally diseased.

Cross-examination of Dr. Healy began by Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, seeking to bring out the basis of a "childish compact" between Loeb and Leopold and the hearing, upon suggestion of the defense, was not generally heard, the witness testifying in a low voice only for the court and the stenographers.

The matter of which boy struck the fatal blow with a cold chisel remained the puzzle of the trial when Dr. Healy on cross-examination after a fifteen-minute reference to his notes of examinations, said that he had not been told who killed the Franks boy, and did not know.

All Ready for the Big Outing at Canobie Lake

It was a long time from reveille to the hour of departure for the children of St. Peter's orphanage, or at least it seemed so to the 125 youngsters who went on the annual outing to Canobie Lake today. Although the first machine which was to number among the 35 drove up to the door about 9 o'clock, the procession of cars did not leave the city until 10:30 o'clock.
At each horn of an automobile horn the youngsters who were in the assembly hall ran merrily to the front windows anxious to see who the patron was. The height of gaiety was reached, however, when favors and flags were distributed among the children. Shrieky horns and sweet-toned horns, paper hats, vari-colored "shakers" and all sorts of noise-making entrances provided much pleasure to the little ones as they awaited the official signal of departure.
Shortly after 10 o'clock the automobiles drew up to the entrance of the orphanage and as one was filed it proceeded to St. Margaret's church where the procession started for its trip to Canobie Lake by way of Keene square and the Lawrence boulevard, led by Motorcycle Officers Andrew Hunter and Frank Murphy. Preceding the long line of cars rode Rev. Charles J. Gal-livan, pastor of St. Margaret's church, accompanied by the mayor.
Previous to the departure of the cars which transported the children to the park a large truck loaned by the Quinn Coal Co. and loaded down with goodies left for the amusement centre where tables were arranged ready for the youngsters when they arrived.
Shortly before noon the children were served a bountiful luncheon by the ladies of St. Margaret's parish, after which an extensive program of sports was enjoyed. A baseball game between the "Southpaws," captained by Raymond Frome and the "St. Margaret's All Star Boys" team, under the leadership of Edward Flanagan, was staged.

LAST REVOLT
IN MEXICO

President-Elect Calles Says Southern Republic Has

Nation Stands Committed to New Constitution and Its Reforms

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 5.—Mexico has seen its last revolution, General Plu-tarcio Elias Calles, president-elect of the Southern Republic, declares in an interview which the New Orleans item publishes today as a copyright story.
It was the first utterance of the new president since his election.
General Calles will sail from New York for Europe within the next few days.

"I am travelling unofficially to Europe with my brother and members of our families," he said, "to rest from the strenuous seven months which we have gone through in Mexico, and to make a survey of social, labor, and economic conditions in Great Britain, France, and perhaps Germany. That I may apply my observations to the benefit of my country as far as the power is vested in me. Until the promulgation of the result of the presidential election in Mexico, it would be manifestly improper to speak in any official capacity, as at the present I hold no position in Mexico. You may, however, say this:
"Mexico has seen her last revolution. She stands firmly committed to the new constitution, and its reforms.
"Mexicans are going ahead economically and spiritually.
"The rights of foreigners and foreign capital will be respected, and both are welcome in Mexico, when they come there to observe our laws and co-operate for our mutual benefit.
"The international debt of the country must, and will be, paid. It is a debt of honor.
"Mexico will scrupulously respect the integrity of other nations as she demands that other nations respect hers.
"There will be absolute insistence that all government in the republic function for social justice.

UNABLE TO REACH AGREEMENT

Anglo-Russian Conference Called to Settle All Outstanding Claims Breaks Down After All Night Session—Treaty Will Not Be Signed

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(By the Asso-

tween the representatives of Great Britain and soviet Russia have broken down and the projected treaty will not be signed, it was announced this morning by the foreign office.
The British and Russian delegations
were in session all night until 7:15 o'clock this morning, the announcement said. The soviet representatives were unable to accept the amendment to article 14 of the draft treaty. No agreement could be reached, it was stated, and the negotiations broke

ALLEGED FUR THIEVES FIGHT EXTRADITION

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—The men who were arrested in New York last week for the Boston police on a charge of breaking into the store of Edward F. Kakus & Sons, Inc., on Boylston street, say they will fight extradition. Since their arrest, a woman who gave her name as Ella Morris, said to be the wife of one of the men, has been taken into custody.

Inspectors Joseph Rollins and Timothy Donovan of police headquarters, who have been in New York a few days, have just returned to this city.

It was stated at headquarters that the greater part of the loot, which was identified by the Kakus firm, has been returned. Though five trunks filled with furs were found in New York, the police now say that there is still another trunk full of furs that has not been recovered. The whole lot, it was said yesterday at police headquarters, amounted to at least $100,000.

Inspectors Rollins and Donovan, who have been praised by Supt. Crowley for their excellent work in tracing the loot from the Back Bay depot in five trunks to New York city, have been in consultation with Chief Inspector John R. McGarr and Capt. Ainsley C. Armstrong. They say that Joseph Marks and James Bruno are being held in New York in $50,000 bail and Mrs. Morris in $25,000.

The New York police are unwilling to allow John Behrman to get away from them.

According to the information given to Capt. Armstrong by inspectors, Behrman is alleged to have taken part in a fur robbery in New York a little more than a year ago. Behrman was arrested in connection with that robbery and defaulted $10,000 bail. Inspectors Rollins and Donovan say a policeman was shot dead at the time of the New York fur robbery.

Evidence in the Kakus fur robbery case will be presented to the Suffolk grand jury within the next few days.

ENJOY TRIP TO WHITE MOUNTAINS

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ohlson of Wood street have returned after a very pleasant trip to the White Mountains. Their itinerary included a tour as far as Franconia Notch, and they returned by way of the North shore. Next Sunday, Mr. Ohlson and Christopher Stratton, one of the proprietors of Marie's lunch in Gorham street, will leave for a trip to Canada.

CHECK DANCING AT LAKEVIEW

"Ukulele night" will be observed at the Lakeview ball room this evening and the patrons of this popular dancing pavilion are offered an excellent opportunity to procure a ukulele absolutely free. A special dance number will be announced and everyone entering the ballroom will have an equal chance of winning one of these melodious instruments.

"Broderick's Entertainers," known throughout the country by their radio broadcasts, will feature their latest music and the dancing will be by check.

Children's free dancing classes every Wednesday and Friday afternoons at 2.30 o'clock.

FIRE DESTROYS GARAGE

Fire late yesterday morning destroyed the three-car garage of Claude J. Harvey of Bridge street, Dracut, and slightly scorched the rear of the Harvey home. The prompt arrival of the Dracut fire apparatus saved the house from being badly damaged. The garage was empty when the fire started, two large trucks and a touring car being sheltered there nights only. The cause of the fire is unknown. There is insurance.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

RIALTO THEATRE
There are a number of outstanding features in "The Unknown Purple," now playing at Loew's Rialto theatre. One of them is the remarkable manner in which they have handled the purple ray of light about which much of the story revolves. The ray of light is the discovery of an inventive genius, and the possessor of it has the power to make himself invisible to the human eye. Beside that, the splendid acting on the part of not only the principals but every member of the cast alone makes the picture worth the trip to the Rialto. Henry D. Walthall, Alice Lake and Stuart Holmes, the principal members of the cast, give us gripping and human characterizations as have ever been seen on any screen. In support every member of a really all-star cast, including Helen Ferguson, Ethel Grey Terry, James Morrison and Little Frankie Lee, does excellent work.

It is the story of the justified revenge of a man who, with the power to make himself invisible, comes back from the prison to which he was sent for seven years by his faithless wife and her lover. He has gained money and power through his inventive genius, and these, with his great secret he uses against those who betrayed him, until he brings them to the edge of financial and physical ruin, and there he leaves them, far enough into the depths so they can never rise.

Tom Mix in "The Wagon Trail" is the associate feature and is a clockful of action from beginning to end. The story takes place in the old frontier days, and Mix is seen as a member of the Pony Express. Thrilling skirmishes with roaming bands of Sioux Indians and in which Mix does many of his well known stunts, are the features of this picture of covered wagon days. A Buddy Messenger comedy, entitled "The Tenderfoot," and a Fox News conclude the program.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

Vividly picturing a story of American life familiar to all who know and diagnose the whims and ways of the small town with its atmosphere gay and dull and its mixture of "high-toned" and "just common" folks, "Babbitt," Sinclair Lewis' typical American family story now depicted in moving picture drama, is the feature attraction at Merrimack Square theatre the first three days this week. Lewis is the author of "Main Street," widely read and admired.

The production of "Babbitt" calls for lavish expenditure of money in abundance. The scenes are realistic, the story runs along smoothly and engaging the attention of the audience until the end. It is vivid in his genuine presentation of life in a bustling, self-asserting town, whose inhabitants aim high and often fail. The story is not new, but it is told in a new and novel way that reveals many truths of striking interest when surveying "Main Street" and all its vanities and foibles, as it really is. In the leading roles are Carmel Myers, Willard Lewis, Mary Alden, Raymond McKee and Kathleen Myers.

Another lively and enjoyable feature picture at the Merrimack Square, for the first half of the week, is "George Washington, Jr.," an adaptation from George M. Cohan's patriotic play of the same name. Wesley Barry takes a most delightful part in the picture—the leading role, in fact. The supporting cast includes Gertrude Olmstead, Otis Harlan, Edward Phillips, William Courtwright, Charles Conklin and Leon Barry.

The rollicking story is laid in the capital and in historic Mt. Vernon. The boy actor in the role of George Washington, Jr., has many exciting experiences after discovering a questionable count and a band of conspirators, bent upon stealing "the papers." There is the lover, the servant of the house, the recovery of the papers and the bankishment of the conspirators. The Barry acting is, of course, as wonderful as ever.

Educational pictures and views of Yellowstone park are also shown. The International News weekly presenting an excellent offering for the week.

AUGUST SALE OF FURS

Here Are the Reasons
We Advise Buying Furs Now

Even tho we will have to carry 70 per cent of the purchases until December 1st and guarantee the prices to be lower than obtainable in November!

Because—

The finest furs are made early in the season, when the manufacturer can secure the finest pelts—

Made carefully—matched beautifully, because during the summer months only the more expert furriers are at work—the rush season help are laid off. The pelts are matched by experts who have plenty of skins to match up, and who work carefully, as all artists do.

Because—

Prices are lower because the manufacturers work on a closer-margin—with manufacturing costs greatly reduced. N. B.—We sell on a closer margin during August.

We would advise buying Furs in August for quality alone—and with the added saving in money it is surely profitable!

Because—

We can afford to sell at a lower margin—Our regular salespeople are not very busy—we can hold a sale at this time without hiring extra salespeople.

Because—

You get better service—from our most experienced salespeople—that you could not get in the rush season.

Fine Quality Fur Coats
at the lowest prices in many years!

Our purchases of fine Furs represent the greatest values in Furs we have offered since we began to hold August Fur Sales—

You Will Save Money—and Get Better Furs—
By Buying Now!
We Guarantee This Statement!

Buying Furs on Confidence

If there is one article of wearing apparel that must be purchased with confidence, that article is a Fur Coat. No other thing is so subject to clever adaptations of poor quality material. Your only protection is the integrity of the firm from which you buy.

Without complete assurance of the quality of the merchandise full satisfaction can never come to the wearer. There can be no doubt when you select a fur garment at the Bon Marche. Your purchase can be made with that absolute confidence that creates full mental satisfaction.

The Bon Marche has never, for the sake of an attractive selling price, put out a garment that was below the very exacting standard of first quality which we maintain. We value too highly the confidence of our clientele. The integrity of this store, the years of successful merchandising, are behind each individual purchase to the fullest extent.

We guarantee every coat we are offering to be the best quality in each kind of fur. We guarantee every skin perfect or we will replace it at any time. Every coat in this sale is up to the Bon Marche standard of quality.

R. I. Officials "Discourteous and Oppressive"

PROVIDENCE, R. I., August 5.—Governor William S. Flynn today sent to Governor Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts, a letter characterizing as "superficial" and intended to "absolve the officials of Massachusetts from blame or implication in the outrage which has been perpetrated upon the officials of Rhode Island," the investigation into the arrest of Rhode Island assistant attorneys general by Massachusetts constabulary at Rutland, Mass., on July 19.

Governor Flynn, who was replying to Governor Cox's letter of July 31, which upheld the action of the Massachusetts police, said the mission of the Rhode Island officials, was "unquestionably legitimate," and he asserted that the treatment accorded them was "discourteous, unprovoked, humiliating and oppressive."

BIDS OPEN ON SCHOOL PLUMBING

Eleven bidders competed today for the job of plumbing at the Sycamore street school. Bids were opened by Inspector of Buildings John E. Moynahan at 11:30 o'clock. The low bidder was the firm of Quigley and Harrington at $1550 and the award of the contract was immediately made.

Other bidders: Roache and Co., $1318; John H. McGuinness, $1687; J. J. Mullane, $1757; W. H. McElholm, $1864; Daniel J. Leary, $1893; John F. Drury, $1795; Charles Hanchett, $1993; John A. Cotter Co., $1842; Welch Bros., $2498; J. J. Spillane, $1277.

NARROWER SCARFS

Scarfs for fall appear to be a trifle narrower than those for summer, but shawls have lost none of their size or their brilliancy of color and design.

More Money is Required

parliament were fed out of the street department appropriation, no proper provision having been made to feed them. This year, the horses were fed out of the appropriation for ash and waste collection. Considerable money has been spent for horse hire and it will be necessary to continue to hire horses until such time as the board has a sufficient appropriation made to purchase horses to equip the entire department.

In the matter of sewer maintenance, the board will need $1500. At the present time, there is a balance of $17240 to the credit of sewer maintenance. The board found it necessary, this year, to purchase a new sewer cleaning machine for $1500. The purchase of this machine was not foreseen at the time of the appropriation. This machine has already saved the department several hundred dollars.

The board, at the present time, is working on figures connected with the entire department and will immediately submit to your honor a full statement as to the expenditures of the money and progress of the work in the street department.

Respectfully submitted,
DENNIS J. MURPHY,
Chairman, Board of Public Service.

Last Night's Meeting

In an effort to get today's statement ready for the mayor, members of the board of public service, assisted by the office staff of the street department, the superintendent of streets, the assistant superintendent of the water department and the city engineer, labored long last night in a struggle with the mass of figures representing the financial activities of the department for the first seven months of the current year. The meeting, called by Chairman Dennis J. Murphy at 8 p. m., was for the purpose of preparing an intelligent and comprehensive answer to the letter received last week from the mayor and asking definite data as to the progress of the department, both financially and materially.

DAVIS AND SMITH MEET

Presidential Candidate Not to Interfere With New York Governor's Plans

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—John W. Davis, democratic presidential nominee, and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York conferred here yesterday, but the subject of the governor becoming a candidate to succeed himself was not discussed.

Mr. Smith previously had made up his mind not to offer himself for re-nomination and with this knowledge at hand Mr. Davis did not urge him to do so. The nominee had stated before-hand that the decision was one left solely with the governor.

Mr. Davis and Gov. Smith canvassed fully the situation in New York state and the east. They were closeted for more than an hour, having lunch in a private dining room.

Mr. Davis and I are in fair accord on the plan of operation to be submitted to the board of strategy," Gov. Smith said. He added that he would not begin to campaign for the national ticket until after Labor day and that his plans had not been fully developed.

The speaking dates of the presidential nominee also are held in abeyance. It was stated yesterday on behalf of Mr. Davis that he had no engagement beyond that at Clarksburg, W. Va., for the delivery of his acceptance address one week from last night.

Coolidge Works on Speech

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Completion of the campaign plans of the republican party will await the acceptance speeches of President Coolidge and John W. Davis, the democratic nominee. Party leaders here say they will not regard the campaign as definitely under way until they have an opportunity to assess the reception of the speeches by the opposition and the public.

All members of the national committee are expected to be here for the formal notification of the president to be held the night of August 14.

Meanwhile, President Coolidge is devoting as much attention as possible to his speech of acceptance. Because of this and the usual cabinet meeting this morning, his engagement list was kept down to a minimum.

In Follette Defers Campaign
WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Senator La Follette is planning to let President Coolidge and John W. Davis, the democratic presidential nominee, lead off in the campaigning. He intends to reserve further comment on issues until both have discussed them publicly, and then, later in the campaign, to state his position with vigor.

This strategy meets with the approval of La Follette's advisers, who point out today that it fits with his decision to forego the customary formal notification ceremony which occasions a speech from the nominee.

TRAVEL MEDICINE FIRST
What sort of a medicine chest should be carried on a vacation?
Mr. Mann began to wonder after he had packed up his flivver and made ready for the "open spaces."

Now, most healthy people take a little mosquito salve and a little sunburn ointment and let it go at that. It isn't a good idea to pack a medicine chest along on an excursion intended for health, unless ordered to do so by the doctor.

However, there are one or two things that may be taken along for precautionary purposes.

Iodine swabs, in handy packages, may be purchased almost anywhere. In case of accidents involving cuts, etc., these are most useful things to have along, as immediate cleansing can be insured.

There are other handy first-aid packages to be had, but one small iodine outfit is about as good as anything.

Also, if you are fearful of snakes, a "first-aid" preparation is now to be had at drug stores and sporting goods places. A serum injection is generally contained in this package, which is so small that it can be carried in a vest pocket.

A little gauze and cotton may be taken along if desired, though in any simple emergency a clean handkerchief will do.

With the possible exception of some mild enthalpe, this is all an average person should require.

DEATHS

WHITELEY—Francis Whiteley, a well known and highly respected resident of this city for many years, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 934 Gorham street, after a long illness. Delegates Unable to Reach Agreement

mier MacDonald in fulfillment of what was virtually a campaign pledge. The purpose of the conference was to settle all the outstanding claims between the two countries, some involving pre-war debts on the part of Russia and others growing out of the soviet government's seizures, under its nationalization policy, of property belonging to British subjects.

The Russians made efforts to secure a loan, which they desired the British government to guarantee. This guarantee the British refused to give. Mr. MacDonald declared that the British bankers demanded recognition of Russia's pre-war debt as a prerequisite to any advance.

The Anglo-Russian treaty negotiations collapsed, according to authoritative information, on the refusal of the soviet representatives to accept an article in the agreement which they insisted left the way open for England eventually to demand compensation for foreign property nationalized by the soviet government. In other words, the explanation runs: It was a flat clash between communism and capitalism, although there had been many evasive discussions of other features of Article XIV, which the Russians found objectionable.

noid, his mechanic, took the air first. Lieut. Eric Nelson and Lieut. John Harding, Jr., in the New Orleans, followed a moment later. They circled the harbor for a moment, waved farewells, and then headed along the Iceland coast toward their destination.

It was the best day since the Raleigh arrived, with the sun shining brightly over the glaciers and no trace of fog. From the north came a stiff breeze which it was felt might somewhat impede the progress of the planes, but the reports from the destroyers stationed along the route indicated excellent visibility with a calm sea.

As on the day the planes arrived, the entire population of the little village gathered today to wave farewell to the fliers, and the only hotel in town was filled to overflowing with farmers from up-country who came to wish the bird-men good luck.

Naval Patrol on Guard

ABOARD U. S. S. RICHMOND, Aug. 5.—(By Wireless to the Associated Press) Every precaution is being taken by the naval patrol to guard the two remaining U. S. army airplanes in their short flight, scheduled for today, along the south coast of Iceland, from Hoen Hornafjord to Reykjavik, preparatory to the hazardous hop to Greenland.

The U. S. S. Raleigh will remain at Hoen Hornafjord, where the "New Orleans," piloted by Eric Nelson, landed from Kirkwall, Scotland, on Saturday, and the "Chicago," commanded by Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, on Sunday.

The destroyer Billingsley was due early today at a point off Portland, the destroyer Reid is stationed 20 miles east of Reykjavik, while the Richmond is due to arrive at Reykjavik at 2 p. m. The course of this vessel will take her along the coast for several hours, so the fliers will be further guarded if they get an unusually early start. The distance of the flight is slightly more than 300 miles.

Lieut. Leigh Wade and his mechanic, Sergeant Ogden, who are aboard the Richmond, are rested after their trying experience of Sunday in which they lost their plane, the "Boston," for a forced landing at sea on the way from Kirkwall to Hoen Hornafjord. They appear most concerned over the loss of their machine, which they had hoped to salvage for sentimental reasons, even if they never flew it again.

Supply Ship Caught in Ice ON BOARD SUPPLY SHIP GERTRUD RASK, ANGMAGSALIK, Greenland, Aug. 5. (By wireless to the Associated Press.)—Ice conditions along the coast of Greenland are worse than they have been in many years and are so bad that the American sound the world fliers probably will have to re-tail on the North Atlantic on the edge of icefield or land in the open water near their supply ship, the Gertrud Rask, or fly directly from Reykjavik to Iqviut, Greenland.

After encountering an ice field 35 miles wide along the east coast of Greenland, the Gertrud Rask stuck fast in the heavy polar ice 15 miles from shore and now is unable to move or withdraw. Unless the ice is scattered by a westerly wind, the vessel probably will not be able to free herself from the ice for several weeks.

The ship is now moving slowly down the coast toward Cape Farewell at the southern tip of Greenland, with the ice field, accompanied by many glaciers. The predicament of the Gertrud Rask, it is expected, will not hold up the fliers since the airman will be able to ship the stop at Angmagssalik and get through to Greenland by one of the three other alternatives.

Local Rotarians

strings gathered up and everything ready for the getaway early. The Rotarians will not take along their meal tickets, nor provide meals for the scouts. It was learned today. That suggestion, first approved, has been abandoned, but Rotarian Ed Melton, scout executive and able superintendent of the present scouts' encampment at Hudson Centre, declares that the boys desire to act as hosts today.

The 1924 summer camp is a branch of boys' work that Lowell Rotarians are deeply interested in. Today's trip to Hudson is to see how nicely the present camp is functioning. Scout Melton plans to have the camp visited by Rotarians, who will inspect its every nook and corner. Sports and drills were on the program, also. Inspection of quarters will also be made. Mr. Melton was prepared to explain everything about the work being performed in every branch of the scouts' summer rotating camp.

Several Rotarians left a little earlier in the afternoon, after a little earlier to leave the city promptly at 5 o'clock. The early starters for the most part are vitally interested in the summer activities of the boy scouts. For those Lowell business men who "made" Hudson Centre before 2 p. m., there were water sports programs, "very special." Those who preferred to go in bathing brought their own suits and towels.

Mr. Melton planned a real program for the Rotarian visitors who journeyed to Hudson via Varum avenue. The return to Lowell will be made in the late evening.

5000 Members Attend Mass
at New York Cathedral
Which Opened Session

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Five thousand Knights of Columbus attended a solemn high mass at St. Patrick's cathedral today, which formally opened the 42nd annual international convention of the order. The mass was celebrated by Bishop Daniel J. Curley of Syracuse.

Bishop William Turner, of Buffalo, one of the national leaders of the Catholic hierarchy, made Americanization the keynote of his sermon, and praised the work of the Knights.

His conception of true Americanism was described as "to fear the anger of a just God, to respect all law, to reverse all authority."

After the mass, the delegates marched down Fifth avenue to the Waldorf Astoria, where the convention will be in session until Thursday afternoon.

Aside from delegates from the 48 states of the union, others in attendance are from Canada, Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, Philippines, Hawaii, and the Canal Zone.

John Barton Payne chairman of the American Red Cross, presented to the Knights a life-size oil painting of the late Pope Pius X. He said he had bought the portrait in Mexico city. Mr. Payne declared that the Knights and the Red Cross were co-workers in both war and peace.

Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty, after making his annual report, received from Roman Missioner Edward L. Hearn, the special Papal medal struck by order of the Vatican and containing an inscription to the Knights of Columbus in memory of their $1,000,000 American welfare work in Rome, written by Pope Pius XI.

APPLICATION FOR RECEIVER DENIED

NEW YORK, August 5.—Supreme Court Justice Meadwick today denied an application for appointment of a receiver for the Rockwood Hall Country club near Tarrytown.

Harold Butler, who said he originated the plan for the club, had charged that the Tarrytown Realty syndicate, which he organized, had been deprived of its interest in the club after 14 members of the syndicate had subscribed $35,000 in return for which they were to receive a profit of $50,000 and life membership in the club.

The president of the club is Frank H. Hitchcock, former postmaster general.

Continued Progress Depends
on Acceptance Report,
Says Goldsmith

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 5.—Continued progress in Europe depends on the acceptance report, according to Col. Allen C. Goldsmith, chief of the European division of the United States department of commerce and a technical adviser of the Dawes commission. "There is no alternative," said Col. Goldsmith, who spoke today at the Institute of Politics. If the report is not accepted, he declared, there will be nothing to fall back upon except the status quo which "at the very best would mean continually multiplying obstacles and obstructions to economic progress, and at the worst, perhaps, financial chaos and economic collapse in Europe with its inevitable repercussion on the world in general."

Members of the families of the slayers also may be called upon before the defense closes its case, it was indicated.

FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE DAY DEMONSTRATION

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—The committee who will have charge of the National Defense Day demonstration in each of the New England states except Maine were announced today by Major General Andre W. Brewster, commanding the First Corps Area. Governor Baxter of Maine has declined to name a committee.

At the same time the plans for the mobilization of forces in this state were made public by Governor Cox.

At eight o'clock on the night of September 12, every national guard unit will meet at its armory for an hour and a half of drill. Where there are no national guard units, the commander of the American Legion will be in charge. Organized reserve skeletons will be recruited by their officers as if for national defense. Local enlistments to the organizations will be obtained for the day only. Mass meetings of civilians may be held. Spanish war camps, G.A.R. posts, former state guard organizations and draft boards are being asked to take part in the grand patriotic demonstration. Parades may be held where desired.

The number of persons who participate is to be reported to the adjutant-general.

Massachusetts—Brigadier General Jesse F. Stevens, adjutant general; Major General Edward L. Logan, commanding the 26th division; Brigadier General Richard K. Hale of Boston; Brigadier General Alfred Foote of Boston and Brigadier General Thomas Foley of Worcester.

Rhode Island—Brigadier General John J. Richards, adjutant general; Brigadier General Herbert S. Lane, Colonel William M. P. Downen, Stephen J. Casey, George W. Troy.

New Hampshire—Brigadier General Charles W. Howard, adjutant general; James W. Romick, Clarence B. Carr.

Vermont—Brigadier General Herbert T. Johnson, adjutant general; Major Harold P. Sheldon, Major Nathan C. Peterson, Captain John B. Fowler.

ent normalcy in England is comparable with the apparent peace in Ireland, but beneath the surface there are rumblings that cannot be overlooked.

"The most outstanding economic feature in England today, aside from the generally increased costs of living, is the tremendous income taxes the government exacts from its people," said Mr. O'Donnell. "These taxes are a great deal heavier and more burden-

some than ours and are apparently to continue for some time, and yet I did not hear one word of complaint from people who have to pay them. They admit the tax burden is an aftermath of the war and accept it stoically and without complaint.

"Englishmen agree and admit that England has practically no chance of collecting from Russia and other European nations any of the money it pledged would be paid the United States on war loans and the empire is digging deep into its own pockets and resources to meet these obligations."

Mr. O'Donnell did not find any evidences of active industry in England and felt conditions there to be about the same as in this country today. There is a considerable amount of ship building and the construction of locomotives and railroad cars and equipment for Japan, the Argentine and South Africa, but the textile business apparently is no better than in the United States. It was told him that the woolen trade shows signs of life, but still is far away from boom proportions.

The outstanding feature of the political situation in England today is the fall from grace and public esteem of David Lloyd George and Mr. O'Donnell said that the London press is directly outspoken on the subject. "Lloyd George is not in good standing today," he said, "and the general impression seems to be that he is living up to the designation of 'political mountebank.' He is making many speeches, but is in constant dispute and turmoil with government officials and members of parliament. The press comment is to the effect that it seems a shame that a man who performed so brilliantly for the empire during the days of war should drop so suddenly in public esteem and confidence."

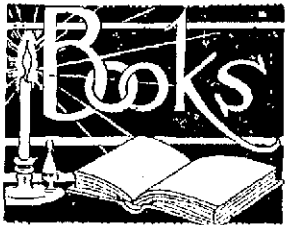

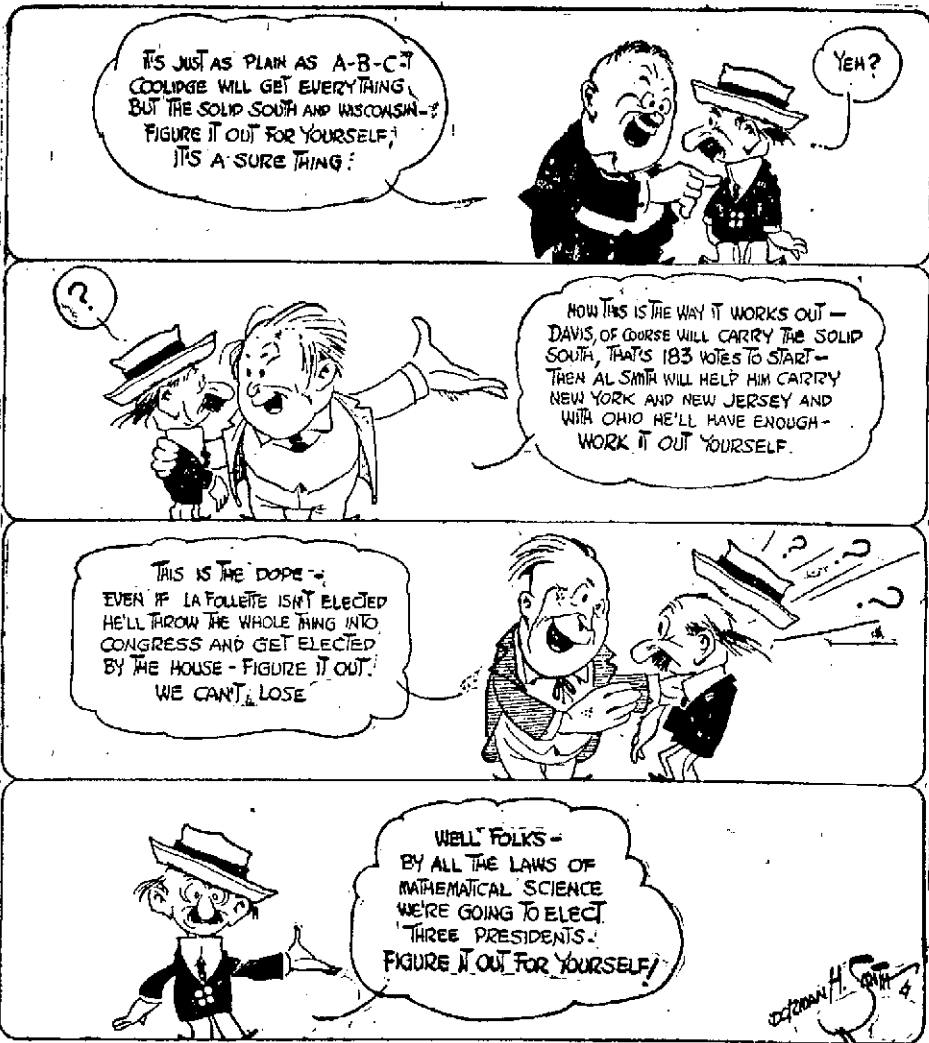

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell spent ten days in Ireland and were there when DeValera was released from prison after 14 months of confinement. On the surface Ireland is peaceful, but only on the surface, Mr. O'Donnell said.

"It is of great importance, however," he continued, "to know that upon DeValera's release he made the statement that he feels the time has passed for the republicans to make militaristic advances against the Free State government and now urges parliamentary means of procedure rather than by force of arms."

There is a tremendous amount of tourist travel in England at the present time, despite high railroad tariffs and the beautiful lake region of Scotland continues the magnet to attract thousands of pleasure seekers. Speaking of their ocean trips, Mr. O'Donnell said that both passages were made on water as calm as the proverbial mill pond.

IT'S A WONDERFUL YEAR FOR THE PAD AND PENCIL EXPERT

BY THE N.E.A. BOOK SURVEY

One must thank the war for a new type of fiction work now becoming rather plentiful. It is the mystery novel, based on adventures of secret service agents. In it figures a new note—hypnotism. Combine adventure with the occult and you will come pretty close to describing this new school.

So it belongs the latest John Buchan novel, "The Three Hostages" (Houghton, Mifflin). It depicts another chapter in the life of Sir Richard Hannay, British secret service agent, but now retired.

He has had his fill of adventure in previous Buchan books, and in the first chapter of this one, is content to settle down on his English estate with his beautiful wife and their small boy. But of course this would never do. So Buchan conceals a wild conspiracy in which Bolsheviks and hypnotism figure. Three persons, members of prominent American and British families, are kidnapped and held as hostages. Authorities come to Hannay and beg him to set his hand to work to free them. They must be free by a certain day, because then a round-up of the conspirators will come, and unless the hostages are free, it is feared their death would result.

Hannay accepts finally. How he succeeds makes the delightful story. Growing youths will be absorbed in the tale.

Buchan is a born story-teller. He enslaves the reader and rivets the eye to the printed page. A sketch of the life of the author proves as entertaining as his books. John Buchan was born in 1876 of an old border family; he was educated at Glasgow university and Brasenose college, Oxford, where he graduated with honors after winning many of the college prizes.

In 1901 he was called to the English bar. In the same year he went to South Africa as private secretary to Lord Milner, high commissioner.

There Buchan organized the agricultural and land departments for the Transvaal, traveled extensively all over South Africa up to the Zambesi and shot big game, felt eternally in love with the country and became a convert to Cecil Rhodes' dream of a united British empire.

In 1907 he became a partner of Thomas Nelson and Sons, Limited, and later stood for his home county as an unopposed candidate for parliament. At the outbreak of the World war he was commissioned and by 1916 was lieutenant-colonel and for a time liaison officer between the British and French armies.

In 1916, Mr. Lloyd George appointed him director of information in the British foreign office, a position which he held until the end of the war.

During these years he found time to write his "History of the Great War,"

COMING ELECTION LIKELY TO ESTABLISH NEW PARTY

BY HARRY B. HUNT,
N.E.A. Service Writer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The presidential election next Nov. 4 may be important, historically, far beyond any election since the Civil war. It may become a mile-post, marking a very definite point in American affairs.

This importance lies not in the remotely possible election of Senator La Follette to the presidency.

It lies not in the recognized possibility that the election may be deadlocked and the choice of a president thrown into congress.

It does not even lie in the virtual certainty that an "independent" balance of power will be returned in the new congress.

The really important possibility in the coming election is that it will place on a secure and permanent footing a new national party—a "third" party sufficiently strong and aggressive to sit in at the national political game on terms of equality with republicans and democrats.

Despite the fact that Senator La Follette and his followers have disclaimed the formation at this time of a new national political party, running simply as "independents," in protest against the platforms and policies of the two old parties, it is none the less true that there is an underlying hope, even an expectation, that a new national party will be born of the struggle in the coming campaign.

Although such a new party might properly be classed as "liberal," with both old parties grouped under the definition of "conservative," it is unlikely that any coalition between the remaining groups in the republican and democratic parties could be effected which would unite them under a common head against the new "liberal."

The result would be that, for an indefinite period, at least, three major parties instead of two would contest for supremacy in every national election.

The result of a tri-party, instead of a bi-party, system would introduce difficulties that, if long continued, might force far-reaching changes in our elective machinery and legislative processes.

For instance: Should there be three strong, permanent parties, it would be virtually impossible for any presidential candidate over to obtain a majority in the electoral college.

This would force, ultimately, a change in the method of electing the president—possibly direct elections, instead of through the medium of electors—since it is not likely the country would long stand for elections being thrown regularly into congress.

No less a political partisan than George Lockwood, editor of the National Republican and former secretary of the republican national committee, declares that a general overhauling of our political and legislative machinery must result if third party groups are to hold a balance of power in congress and in national elections.

The importance, then, on the permanent political history of the United States, of the present "independent" movement, far outweighs its immediate effect in the present campaign.

If, as its supporters maintain, the "independent" movement is not a La Follette movement primarily, but finds its strength in fundamental economic and civil conditions instead of in the personality and persuasiveness of any individual, then any considerable strength developed in this year's campaign is almost certain to be crystallized into the nucleus for a new national party.

If the La Follette candidacy is personal, rather than fundamental, then there's no use worrying about the troubles to come in a tri-party system.

But just which it is no two groups will be able to agree until the votes have been cast this fall.

TRESCHEM-TEPLITZ, Aug. 5.—This is the height of the market season here, the market in which girls of marriageable age wait for husband-customers. Here at this bathing resort the summer marriage mart has become an established institution. The war created an overbalance in the population, women far outnumbering the men. And so the girls of Tepitz, seeking husbands and homes, display themselves in rows along the street. Dressed in their best they sew and knit, to show prospective husbands that they will make thrifty housewives.

Tariff Commissioner Says
Hoover Never Tried to
Exert Influence Upon Him

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 5.—Secretary Hoover never in any way tried to exert influence upon William S. Culbertson, vice-chairman of the Tariff commission, said Mr. Culbertson today. He is attending the Institute of Politics here and was commenting upon the reported charge by Senator La Follette that the secretary of commerce had sought to influence the commissioner with regard to sugar duties. "Senator La Follette," said Mr. Culbertson, "is reported to have said that Secretary Hoover brought pressure upon me to change my views as a tariff commissioner upon the sugar duties. I cannot believe that the senator reported correctly, but if he made such a statement, it was based on information which is absolutely false. Mr. Hoover has never in any way tried to exert influence upon me. No one has been a more sympathetic supporter of scientific tariff-making than Mr. Hoover, and it is absurd to suggest that he would seek by personal or political influence to interfere with the judicial application of the law. No denial of the charge accredited to Senator La Follette should be necessary to the American public, which has come to know and to rely upon the high standard of public morality which guides the secretary of commerce in all his acts."

BOLSHEVIK BAND RAIDS
POLISH TOWN

WARSAW, Aug. 5. (By the Associated Press.)—A Bolsheviki band, armed with machine guns and bombs, has raided the Polish town of Stolpce (Stolpce, southwest of Minsk), say dispatches just received. The raiders released the prisoners from the jail, and pillaged the postoffice and railroad station, smashing the telegraph and telephone instruments to that the news was not transmitted to Warsaw until the affair was over. The cabinet has been recalled in special session to consider the recurring border raids, of which the latest is said to be one of the first examples.

EVERETT CHILD
KILLED BY AUTO

EVERETT, Aug. 5.—Running across the street in front of a car operated by Henry J. Wells of 3 Poplar street, Malden, 7-year-old Consetta Manna of 8 Orient avenue, was struck and almost instantly killed last night. The accident occurred at the corner of Bow street and Landon street. Wells said he was driving up Bow street and that at the corner he saw a group of children playing. One of them, he said, ran across directly in front of his machine. The radiator struck her, knocked her down and the car passed over her body.

Wells picked the girl up in his arms and carried her into the police station, where she was pronounced dead by Dr. John F. Williams. Wells was placed under arrest on a technical charge of manslaughter and released in $1000 bonds. Witnesses of the accident say that Wells was not going at an excessive rate of speed.

RALPH DE PALMA IS REINSTATED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—Ralph De Palma, veteran racing driver, who left the American Automobile association last January to compete on the tracks of a rival organization, is back in the fold again, he announced here last night.

DERAILED EXPRESS TRAIN RAMS STATION, FOUR PERSONS HURT

Boston-Newport Express, Off Tracks, Runs on 100 Yards at Stoughton, Sideswiping Shanty and Gates—250 Passengers Escape Injury

STOUGHTON, Aug. 5.—Jumping the track, the Newport express, speeding toward Boston at 30 miles an hour late yesterday afternoon, bumped along 100 yards of ties, narrowly missing striking the brick roundhouse, tore off the front of the flag shanty, injuring a man inside and the crossing-tender, and stopped when the first baggage car fell against a coal car three tracks to the left, and the locomotive, swinging to the right, dove full length into the front of the Stoughton station.

No one was dangerously injured. Frederick P. Stucke, the engineer, and J. W. Brown, fireman, were taken from the wreckage of their locomotive suffering from many bruises and cuts. The two men hurt at the crossing are hardly more seriously hurt.

Four Girls Escape
Four little girls in the women's room of the station were harried in the room when the locomotive stopped. They plunged less than a foot from their door and debris jammed the gap. They broke a window and jumped out, crying, but unhurt.

The engineer and fireman were treated by Dr. H. Perry Leavitt and sent to Forest Hills hospital. Dr. B. H. Bwing, associate medical examiner, attended Robicheau and Lyons and went then home.

Henry L. Hall of Boston, the baggage master, who had been in the second baggage car, helped the conductor, C. B. Thompson of Dedham, to lead some 250 passengers, bruised and frightened, but calm, out of the five coaches, in none of which a single window had broken.

Firemen Called
The accident happened about 4:35. Immediately after the locomotive plunged into the station, both the fire and police departments were notified and the whole town rushed to the scene. The arrival of fire apparatus and other autos jammed the vicinity of the station and square and firemen and police together worked to keep the streets leading to the station clear of traffic.

The train was made up of five passenger coaches and two baggage cars, the first one being blind. From Taunton to Boston it is an express. By the time it reached North Easton it was traveling at an estimated speed of 30 miles an hour.

Baggage Car Derailed
About 100 yards south of Stoughton station, the train passed over a switch and about 15 feet farther on, the locomotive derailed. It is believed that the leading baggage car, but off the tracks first at this point, but to the right of the tracks in a zig-zag course.

In the bounding and zig-zagging, ties were torn, the road-bed damaged and spikes holding the track plates to the ties were loosened for a distance of more than 1000 feet. At a point near the small roundhouse, which is situated about 150 feet south of the station, the right rail started to give way and tipped to the right at an angle of about 45 degrees.

It was about here that the second baggage car containing baggage master Henry L. Hall of Boston and A. C. Woods, went off the tracks.

Shanty Ripped Open
The locomotive apparently started to go off the tracks at this point also, for there were deep furrows along the road-bed from this point on to the station.

In leaving the tracks, the locomotive passed the roundhouse swaying to the right and barely missed it. It struck the stone embankment glancingly and then struck the crossing tender shanty, which is on the stone embankment of the hut. One side was torn away.

In the shanty at the time was Michael Lyons of Canton street, West Stoughton, a night watchman at Meads Rubber Company. Lyons had dropped into the shanty on his way to work to pay a call on Florio Robicheau, the crossing tender. The shanty, taking away most of the contents including a small stove, Lyons was struck by pieces of the debris and was injured about the legs.

Crossing-Tender Felled
Robicheau, who lives up Wyman st. about 50 yards from the crossing, was standing at the control post of the crossing gates. He had the gates lowered. The careening engine, tender and baggage car, struck the control post, knocked the crossing gates into splinters and scattered them in all directions. Debris struck Robicheau in the left side and knocked him down. He was showered with dirt, rocks and splinters and received numerous cuts and bruises.

Continuing, the train crossed the Wyman-st. crossing. About half-way across, Wyman street, the locomotive started to list to the left. It crashed through the stone wall of the station and into the women's waiting room, destroying everything in sight, and came to a stop at the door of an inner room.

Crash Heard Over Town
A deafening roar, accompanying this crash could be heard all over town. The steam cylinders on the locomotive were punctured as it went through the wall of the station. This undoubtedly saved the engineer, Frederick P. Stucke of 2 Parkton road, Jamaica Plain, from a scalding. The steam escaped through the holes and filled the partially demolished station.

Just as the locomotive was about to strike the station, Jeremiah W. Brown of Foxboro, the fireman, jumped from the cab. When the engine stopped, it tipped over on the left side, where Brown had been stationed.

The tender slaved around past the station structure and overturned. The connections between the tender and the first baggage car snapped and the baggage car leaped across the tracks. The forward end of the baggage car crashed into a coal car. The baggage car blocked all traffic on the tracks for several hours.

James H. Sullivan of 555 Harrison avenue, Boston, a former member of the state police patrol, who is now on his vacation here, was sitting in his machine which had stopped at the crossing gates to allow the train to pass. A piece of the gate struck the front of the car.

Parking his car close to the station, he left it and together with Forest Vanson, nephew of the chief of police, rushed into the demolished section of the station and helped Engineer Stucke out of the wreckage.

The passengers left the coaches quietly. None of them reported any injuries and none was treated by local physicians. A train, bound from Boston to Newport, took them back to Canton, where they changed trains again and were taken to Boston.

Girls Panic-Stricken

The four little girls, Philomena Barbato, 10, and her sister Mary, 11, both of 21 Wyman street, and Annette Glasson, 8, and her sister, Annie Glasson, 9, of 946 Washington street, became panic-stricken when they opened the door of the washroom and were met with steam and smoke. They shouted and screamed, but their cries were not heard.

Philomena Barbato was the first to regain her composure and she broke one of the windows of the washroom with her hand, receiving a slight cut in doing so. She broke away enough of the window so that all four were able to crawl through it.

Investigation Today
About three hours after the accident,

wrecking crews from Readville and Taunton reached the scene and started to clear off the tracks. Before the workmen started to work, members of the crew of Engine 1 of the local fire department, laid a chemical line and put out the fire in the firebox of the locomotive. The wreckage was not entirely cleared away at midnight.

The little gray stone station was built in 1888. With a locomotive in its waiting room, its huge radiator thrown from the centre of the room against the back wall, its floor ripped out and its benches tossed in all directions, the station inside was damaged to the extent of thousands of dollars.

New Haven railroad officials said late last night that it is too early for them to make an official report of the cause of the accident. The ordinary procedure is for the division superintendent to investigate the wreck the day after and make a report. The superintendent in the Providence division is George A. Poore.

There was much comment on the fact that the station platform, which had been filled with passengers five minutes before the wreck, awaiting a local train, were empty when the accident occurred.

HEARING BEFORE MASTER
An action of contract, whereby Charles F. Crafts seeks to recover commissions alleged to be due him from Ray Stanton for the sale of two automobiles, was begun today at the Gorham street market before Attorney Frank Goldman, sitting as a master. Richard B. Walsh represents Mr. Crafts, with Edward J. Tierney and John A. Crowley appearing for Mr. Stanton.

HURIED IN SAND SLIDE
William J. O'Connor, 46 Church street, employed as a laborer by John Brady, was buried in a sand slide at the Brady pit off Steadman street, this forenoon. He was given first aid treatment by fellow-workers and taken to St. John's hospital in the ambulance. He was found not to have been seriously injured, however, and was discharged.

The meanest man in the United States ate a green apple so he could keep the family awake all night.

Attractive Lawn Party to Be Held Thursday Afternoon and Evening

A lawn party that promises to be a very attractive affair in every respect will be held Thursday afternoon and evening on the grounds of the Gilmore residence in Middlesex street, North Chelmsford. Bernard F. Gilmore is general manager of the enterprise. He is being ably assisted in his efforts by a committee composed of different members of St. John's parish, all of whom are determined to make the coming celebration a big success in every respect.

In the afternoon there will be special attractions for the children, the principal feature of which will be a pageant given under the direction of Miss Ruth Ward. Other amusements will be provided to give the children a real pleasant time. The grown-ups will also be given every opportunity for a good time in the evening. There will be music and open-air dancing in addition to numerous other features, which will include whist playing under the direction of Mrs. B. F. Gilmore. The lawn party without booths would be similar to a turkey dinner without dressing. Therefore, arrangements have been made to have a number of booths located at different parts of the commodious lawn, from which a number of attendants will be eager to attend to the wants of the large crowd that is expected to be present.

From all accounts, the decoration and the illumination of the lawn in the evening will prove an attraction in itself. This part of the arrangements comes under the personal care of Mr. Gilmore, who has given the assurance that these groups, which have already been the scene of many successful gatherings, will present an appearance that has never been equalled in the past, let alone exceeded. Therefore, if the weather man is only on his best behavior on that day, there is every reason to believe that this lawn party, which is being held under the auspices of St. John's parish, will prove a big financial success, as well as a social event that will prove a credit to the promoters.

GOOD DANCE MUSIC AT THE COMMODORE

Tonight at the Commodore ballroom "Mal" Hallett and his orchestra will play for dancing featuring all the latest in dance music and played in a manner which will surely please. The orchestra is composed of eleven first class musicians and each one is an artist. During the evening specialty numbers will be offered by members of the team and the evening's entertainment will be worth the price of admission. Dancing will be by check with a small admission of 10 cents being charged.

"Mal" Hallett will not appear at the Commodore again for several weeks. This evening's engagement concluding his summer contract at this resort.

ELECTED HEAD OF WESTFORD SCHOOLS

Charles D. Carter has been elected superintendent of Westford schools. William C. Rodenhuis will supervise the high school and the following new teachers have been appointed: Peter Perry, high school commercial department; David Hamblen, Newton, science and mathematics; Hiram Taylor, Worcester, assistant; Edward M. Sterling of Everett, principal of Nashua school; transportation of school children; Nathanael district, Albert Hill-dreth; Brookfield district, Clarence Hill-dreth; Brookfield, Perley E. Wright; North End, George Burke; Forge Village, John B. Gray and Joseph G. Walker; Granville, Carl Lydard.

MRS. DON C. SEITZ DIES AT PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 5.—Mrs. Mildred E. Seitz, wife of Don C. Seitz, business manager of the New York World, died last night at St. Barnabas' hospital, following an operation. She had been passing the summer, as had been her habit, at Summit Spring in Harrison.

Mrs. Seitz was the daughter of the late John H. Blake of the East Deering district, where she was born in 1861. She was married to Mr. Seitz in 1890, and they have since lived in Brooklyn, where she was prominent in affairs.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two daughters, Miss Mildred Seitz and Mrs. E. M. Geibel of Tien Tsin, China.

LOWELL YOUNG MEN IN HAVERHILL COURT
Six Lowell young men were involved in an automobile accident in the Ward Hill section of Haverhill Sunday evening, and as a result five of them were arraigned in the Central district court of that city yesterday morning. Edward B. Molloy of Corbett street, alleged owner and operator of the car, was charged with drunkenness and operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued a full Aug. 15.

Fines of $10 each were imposed on Sylvester J. Harris of Ray street, Frank J. Mehan of Gorham street, George Mitchell of Weed street and Albert O'Brien of Butterfield street, all charged with being drunk. The sixth member of the party, Geo. W. O'Hare, is confined to a Haverhill hospital with minor injuries. He was the only member of the party who was not intoxicated, police said. His injuries are not considered serious.

27TH INTERNATIONAL MINERS' CONGRESS

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 5.—The 27th international miners' congress opened here yesterday. After the preliminary formalities, the secretary of the Amsterdam trades union reported on conditions in the United States, wage and working conditions in Europe and Asia, and the problem of the eight-hour day.

At the afternoon session a resolution concerning a uniform minimum wage and working day was submitted to the congress. American delegate Kennedy and a number of others announced that the resolution was supported by their organizations.

do their own police work is somewhat open to criticism. The matter having been brought to public attention so forcibly of late it is certain to be one of the important subjects of consideration for next year's general court. If that body sees fit to make more stringent laws relating to the carrying of firearms the number of permits is likely to be greatly reduced in 1925.

In other places where the records disclose an excessive number of permits, the reasons are little short of surprising. Here are some:

"Protection of myself and family against a vicious dog in the neighborhood. Milkman, market gardener, stable keeper, traveling with expensive instruments, business principles as underwriter, electrician, master mechanic and school teacher, all for self protection."

"Traveling a long road, doctor, night calls, overnight hikes with my wife, traveling salesman, carries money, business man, sometimes has large sums of money."

Do Own Police Work
Officials who have studied lists of the reasons, including those given above, have observed that some of these people appear to be acting for themselves when the police should be doing it for them. They say that any local authority who expects citizens to

LIQUOR RETURNED

NEW YORK, August 5.—Prohibition Director Merrick yesterday ordered immediately returned to Hugo Gilbert for aged and infirm persons, was seized in his East 54th street home last week in a raid by prohibition enforcement agents.

A federal inquiry has been started to determine the steps leading up to the raid on the home of Mr. de Fritsch, whose wife is said to be a niece by marriage of Chief Justice Taft. It has been charged that the prohibition agents obtained a warrant to search the de Fritsch home on false representations.

OLD AGE PENSION UNCONSTITUTIONAL

HARRISBURG, Penn., August 5.—An act passed by the Pennsylvania legislature a year ago, providing pensions for aged and infirm persons, was declared unconstitutional yesterday.

The decision was based upon the constitutional provision that no appropriations except for pensions or gratuities for military services, can be made for any benevolent purposes.

SUFFERED PAIN FOR YEARS

Mrs. Jahr Finally Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Howard Lake, Minn.—"I write to let you know that I have taken several bottles of your medicine in the last three months, and found it to be very good. I had pains and other troubles women have and was not able to do my work. Seeing your 'Ad.' in the paper, I thought of giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I got good results from it and feel able to do my housework now. I used to have lots of pains, but after taking the medicine I am relieved from pains that I had suffered from for years. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends, and hope this letter will be satisfactory for you to publish."—Mrs. JENNIE JAHR, R. R. No. 2, Box 81, Howard Lake, Minn.

Phil Payton Allows But Two Hits in City Twilight League Game—Dickerson Hits Homer—Schedule of Games Revised

CITY LEAGUE STANDING

Butlers	2	6	.250

With Phil Payton twirling big league ball and entire East End team lacing the leather for telling blows, the Butlers of the City Twilight League were forced to swallow a bitter 10-0 whitewash on the South common last night. Payton, in allowing the opposition but two scratch hits, one of them an infield clout, pitched the best game of his career. Mixing a slow under-hand ball with a series of fast-breaking curves, Payton had the doughty Butlers fairly eating out of his hand and should have been credited with a no-hit, no-run game.

Bill Crossland's East Ends gave a perfect exhibition of the national pastime. They displayed a fighting spirit from the first inning until Umpire Carle Allen called play to the fifth because of impending darkness. Dickerson, with three hits to his credit, led the stickers, who got to "Duke" Carroll after the fourth stanza and did much damage in his southpaw service. Golden and Dowd connected for doubles. Bettencourt came through with a triple and Dickerson went him one better by clouting the sphere to deep left center for a homer. All the East End hits were of the clean variety.

For three innings nary a rally came to pass and the fans sat back to witness what gave every indication of being a life struggle. As the East Ends and Butlers were in a triple tie for fourth place in the league standing, they were to give their all to break it. As a result neither team took any chances in the first few innings, but the East Ends broke the tie in the fourth and put two runners across the plate. Dickerson started activities with a single to centre and pilfered second. Golden then followed with a double to the right field cliff and Dick rounded the paths. Golden registered on Dowd's two sacker to right.

In the following inning, six big runs for the East Ends put the game on the proverbial ice. All kinds of angles greeted Carroll in this session. A couple of free passes were thrown in for good measure and when the inning was concluded, a sextet of markers were on the score board. Meanwhile, Payton continued to hold the Butlers at bay and was getting away with one hit until the sixth when a scratch down the third base alley gave them one more. Dickerson injected his mighty homer in the sixth with a man on base, and it was all over. The score:

EMERALDS DEFEATED BY P. A. A. DEFEAT DIXONS THE VICTORIAS 1 TO 0 IN FINE GAME

With two regulars out the Emeralds lost to the Victorias, 5 to 1, on the North common last evening. The victors gathered the benefit of the breaks and of the five errors made by the boys in green. The feature of the game was the long slam for a round ticket made by White.

Last Friday's 2 to 2 game between the Emeralds and the Pawtucket Blues will be played off tomorrow while the game of the Troquois and Mysteries will go over to the following Wednesday.

WEST GROTON TEAM DEFEATS LEOMINSTER

The Leominster A.A. met its worst defeat of the season last Saturday when the H. and V.A.A. of West Groton walked away with an 11 to 5 win. Mr. Pickford's pitching ace, Hancock, was driven from the mound in the first inning when the H. and V. heavy artillery, consisting of O'Neil, Woodson, Smith and Driscoll got to the bog moundman for a series of serious clouts. Plouffe succeeded him on the rubber and got away nicely until the fifth when Cleary, Gath and the other Babe Ruths of the H. and V. again began slugging them to all corners of the lot.

By defeating the Dilhey Post club, 5 to 1 at Medford last evening, the Abbot Vascels moved into first place in the Greater Boston Twilight League standing. Going at top speed, the Abbot boys took an 11 to 5 victory. If they continue at the present pace, they will get into the post-season series with the Lawrence Independents, winners of the first half. What could be sweeter?

DETROIT, Aug. 5.—Frank O'Rourke, shortstop of the Toronto International League club, has been purchased by Detroit and it is expected he will report here in time for today's game. President Frank Navin announced. The purchase price was withheld.

THE CRESCENTS OF WOBURN DEFEATED

The Crescents of Woburn were defeated by the state infirmary team of Tewksbury by a 7 to 1 score at Tewksbury Saturday. "Mike" Gibbons, former high school slasher, worked on the mound for the winners and had 12 strikeouts.

TICKER PUTS PAL MOORE DOWN FOR COUNT

BY JOE WILLIAMS
Pal Moore used to swing an irritating mitten in the ring. Few of the boys could take him. Particularly was he poison to the champions. Williams, Erle, Herman and Lynch, all were pasted by the Memphis freak—a thin, scrawny atom who violated all the orthodox principles of pugilism.

Moore was popular and industrious and while he never fought for the title in a decision match, with a rich purse involved, he was capable manager and made a lot of money.

Several years ago he was persuaded to make an investment in a Chicago automobile enterprise. The fighter had $50,000 in savings. The proposition looked good. An old friend had presented it. All of Moore's money went into it.

TICKER PUTS PAL MOORE DOWN FOR COUNT

BY JOE WILLIAMS
Pal Moore used to swing an irritating mitten in the ring. Few of the boys could take him. Particularly was he poison to the champions. Williams, Erle, Herman and Lynch, all were pasted by the Memphis freak—a thin, scrawny atom who violated all the orthodox principles of pugilism.

Moore was popular and industrious and while he never fought for the title in a decision match, with a rich purse involved, he was capable manager and made a lot of money.

The business flourished spectacularly. Moore's investment was soon $150,000. Moore decided he had enough worth $100,000. Later it soared to $150,000. At the height of his skill of fighting, at the time when he was paying his biggest dividends the banishment stepped down. "Why work for a paltry $2000 when you can make a real fortune doing nothing?"

Moore hasn't fought for a year or so. Mostly he has been motorizing through the country and making professional visits to stock brokers. I ran across him the other day up in a small Michigan city. He didn't look much like the "millionaire fighter" I had been reading about.

"I'm looking for Promoter Soand- $500." Moore explained. "He owes me $500. You can write a check for your paper, too, about me staying at home. I've started training already, and I'm going after this guy Goldstein. They tell me he's a bum, is he?"

This was strange chatter, coming from a fighter who had cleaned up sufficiently in stocks to retire, when he was still good enough to whip the champions. By now you have surmised the answer. Moore's winnings and savings have gone the way most winners do—into the stock market.

A sudden, mercurial change developed in the situation and overnight almost Moore was wiped out. Now he has gone back to the gloves. Maybe he is still good enough to beat the champions. But he'll never be good enough to beat the stock market.

TO PREVENT SPREAD OF, BOARD OF HEALTH HOLDS ROUTINE MEETING

WASHINGTON, August 5.—Quarantine Massachusetts, to prevent the spread of a new insect pest, the Oriental, or hag moth, now prevalent in the eastern part of the state, was considered at a public hearing held today by the federal horticultural board of the United States department of agriculture.

The Oriental moth was first discovered in this country in a section of Boston in February, 1908, having probably come here from Japan in a shipment of nursery stock, before the federal plant quarantine law was enacted. The moth has a wide distribution in the Orient and government entomologists believe that it could thrive throughout the United States with the possible exception of the peninsula of Florida.

The larvae, or caterpillars, feed on a variety of trees, and in some instances have caused the defoliation of Norway and sycamore maples, black and gray birches, buckthorn, choke cherry, apple, pear and plum trees. Wild cherry, huckleberry, black and red oak, hickory and sugar maple are reported to have been partly defoliated.

In addition to the injury caused by their feeding, these caterpillars have irritating hairs that cause pain and irritation on the human skin. The distribution of the moth in the United States is now confined, as far as known, to eastern Massachusetts, specimens having been collected at Nahant, Saugus, Weymouth, Boston, South Boston, Dorchester, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, Cambridge, Milton and Quincy.

A federal quarantine would regulate the movement of articles likely to carry the pest into other states.

TO SUBMIT REPORT ON CENTRAL BRIDGE

The city council committee on Central bridge met yesterday and framed a report which will be made at tonight's session of the city council.

The report as framed makes no recommendation to the body as to whether the present bridge should be repaired or replaced, but gives costs of repair and of replacement by two other type bridges, together with the cost of erection of a temporary foot bridge at a point near St. John's hospital to be used should the present bridge be closed.

The figures as presented estimate that the present 55-foot bridge could be repaired for $64,000 or a new 65-foot bridge built in eight months for $534,000 or one of the same size but of concrete, requiring a year to build, for $659,000. All prices are exclusive of the cost of providing trolley facilities, such as rails, overhead wiring and such.

The committee decided to recommend to the council that an expert of known repute be engaged to make a study of the matter and give his professional opinion as to whether a new bridge should replace the present one or the present one be repaired.

BOARD OF HEALTH HOLDS ROUTINE MEETING

The board of health held a routine meeting at city hall last evening.

Donnis Murphy presented a petition of one Joseph Krygoski to use land situated at the corner of Cunningham street and Boston road as a burial place for the Polish Catholic people of Lowell. The land in question is bounded on the north by Cunningham street, on the south by property of Mary A. Manning or heirs, on the east by Curtis and Annie McKewen. A public hearing on the petition will be held next Monday to show cause as to why the petition should be granted.

L. E. McDuffie petitioned the right to keep cows for sale at a stable on his property at 39 Fulton street. Mr. McDuffie was not present at the meeting. After due consideration the board voted to grant Mr. McDuffie leave to withdraw. The secretary was instructed to so inform the petitioner.

At the last meeting of the board it was voted to reopen the case brought against George E. Gagnon of Chelseaford, charged with violation of city plumbing regulations by the Lowell Master Plumbers association. Mr. Gagnon was found probably guilty and his license to work as a journeyman plumber in the city of Lowell was suspended for the period of two weeks.

Sanitary licenses were issued for the collection of garbage.

The following letter was sent out by the department of public health of the commonwealth regarding the spread and prevention of infantile paralysis: "Infantile paralysis (anterior poliomyelitis) is one of the few infectious diseases in which the mode of transmission is still unknown. Consequently, we are not able to take effective measures to prevent its spread.

Experience in Massachusetts has not borne out the assertion made elsewhere, that the disease is more prevalent in the country than in the city. Outbreaks may occur either in the city or the country.

For the past three years the number of cases reported in the state has remained nearly constant. For the current year the number of cases reported to date is only slightly in excess of last year (84 last year, 41 this year). The disease is distinctly more prevalent during the summer months than in the rest of the year.

Patients with infantile paralysis should be isolated in the acute stages of the disease in much the same way that we isolate a typhoid patient. They should be protected against visitors, mosquitoes, flies, etc. They should have separate dishes and silver which are disinfected after use. The body discharges should be disinfected as in typhoid.

There is no evidence that regulations against the congregation of persons, such as might be used in the presence of an epidemic of a disease spread by the upper respiratory tract, have had any influence in controlling infantile paralysis. This would be expected when the relative infrequency of secondary cases in a family is considered.

CONCERT AT COMBON

The 35th Field Artillery Band, Organized Reserves, provided the concert on the South common last night and nearly 10,000 persons turned out to hear the municipal music program provided.

ABANDON PLANS TO ENTERTAIN FLIERS

(Special to The Sun.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Massachusetts' plans for entertaining the world "circling American aviators" when they reach Boston later this month will have to be abandoned, according to a statement issued from the war department. Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commandant of the air flight, has requested that there will be no entertainment until after the Pacific coast is reached and the flight around the world is finished in order that the journey across the United States may be made as rapidly as possible.

The war department will respect Lieut. Smith's wishes; plans for a formal entertainment of the fliers here with the president and other high officials participating, have been given up, and in the statement given out yesterday, the war department urges that its example be followed during the transcontinental flight.

After a rest period following the finish of the flight, the aviators and their planes will be allowed to go to a number of cities in the United States, probably including Boston.

The war department statement, with a caption reading "No Delay for Entertainment," was as follows:

"The chief of air service has received a cablegram from Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commandant of the world flight, in which he urgently requests that no entertainment for the members of the world flight be arranged until after the Pacific coast is reached and the journey around the world is entirely completed. This recommendation is made in order that the flight across the United States may be made as rapidly as possible, to minimize the chances of failure in the last part of the route and to prevent the personnel from relaxing their efforts before their task is done. On their way around the world, Lieut. Smith and his companions have had to decline many offers of entertainment in the countries through which they have passed and have endeavored to avoid any unnecessary delay.

"The great interest aroused by this flight and the pride all Americans feel in the measure of accomplishment already attained have prompted many invitations for them to stop on their way across the United States and it is known that, at the places where stops must necessarily be made, tentative plans for the entertainment of the fliers have been prepared. Lieut. Smith, however, expresses very clearly the attitude of himself and of his companions. They are very grateful to their countrymen for the welcome they have proposed to accord them, but they feel that it is their first duty to complete the task they have undertaken and that nothing should interfere with its prompt accomplishment.

"Prior to the receipt of this message and recommendation from Lieut. Smith, it had been planned to entertain them in Washington and it was hoped that the president, members of his cabinet and other prominent officials would participate.

"Gen. Patrick, the chief of air service, promptly communicated to the war department this communication of Lieut. Smith and it has been decided.

PARIS SUICIDE VICTIM WAS SPRINGFIELD MAN

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The American who ended his life yesterday in a Paris hotel was identified today by the American consulate as Samuel Burnham Chapin, aged 24, of Springfield, Mass., where his mother, Mrs. W. H. Chapin, lives.

Through the misreading of scribbled addresses on the back of an envelope he was yesterday erroneously identified as S. H. Chapin of San Francisco. The young man, who had recently acted strangely, cut his throat and wrist with a safety razor blade. Police investigation disclosed that he had abundant funds.

PRE-WEDDING SHOWER

Miss Mary Fallon was recently tendered a shower at the home of her brother, Prad Fallon in Groton road, North Chelmsford. Miss Fallon who is soon to become the bride of William P. Sullivan of Pepperell, was presented numerous gifts of silverware, cut-glass and linen. In addition to these, the young lady was the recipient of a handsome dinner set, the gift of her friends in the Ipswich hospital. A fine musical program, including vocal and instrumental selections was given. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable time was had by all.

PLAYGROUND PROGRAM

The following program was given on the Greenhills school playground yesterday afternoon:

The teachers are Miss Agnes Dudley, head supervisor and Miss Martha Gallagher, assistant.

OLD JEWELRY

Antique jewelry is very popular now. Old gold and silver necklaces are remounted with semi-precious stones and the effect is very barbaric and splendid.

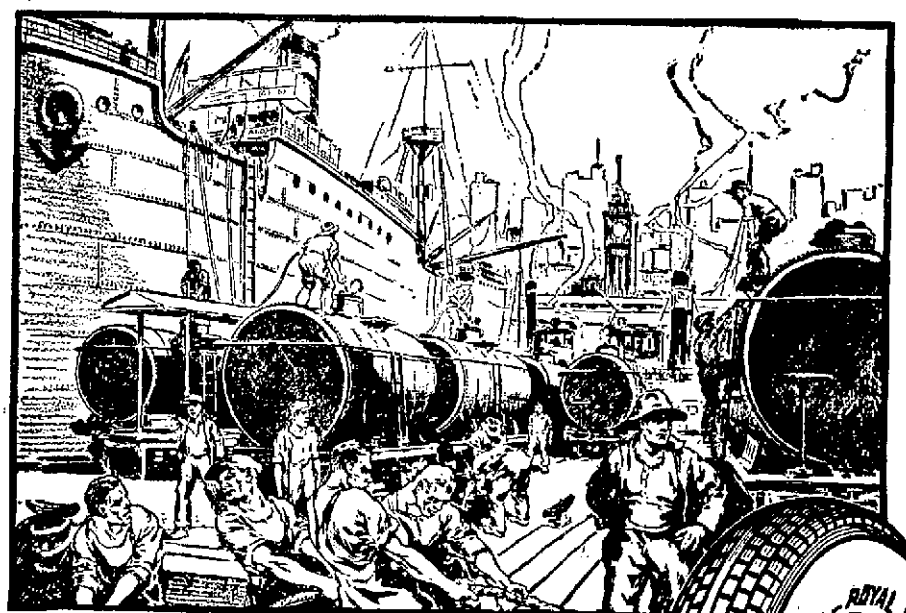

(terminated to have no formal entertainment in Washington, to expedite the departure of the flight from this city and during the time the fliers must remain here to give them an opportunity to rest.

"It is earnestly hoped that the other places where the flight must stop on its way across the United States will follow this example and will accede to the expressed wish of the fliers themselves and omit formal entertainments and other features which might imperil the success of the undertaking now so nearly accomplished.

"After the circuit of the world is completed and the fliers have had a deserved period of rest, it is the intention to send some or all of them and their planes to a number of cities which have expressed their interest in the flight. Then, with their task accomplished, there will be more time for the fliers to meet with those who wish show their appreciation.

What Latex means to U. S. Balloon Tires

NOTICE a balloon tire flatten under the weight of the car and you realize how great a responsibility for combined flexibility and strength low air-pressure construction throws on the tire manufacturer.

When the balloon tire was first being considered the makers of U. S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires had already developed the Latex Process—and patented it.

They had the supply of latex—liquid raw rubber—on their own plantations—and the methods for bringing it to this country.

So U. S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires are built of Latex-treated cords—and have strength and flexibility obtainable by no other method.

Combined with longer service, U. S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires have the advantages of accurate balance and a tread scientifically designed for low air-pressure.

Consequently their tractive and anti-skid qualities meet every requirement of safety and ease in handling at all speeds.

DE MAR HOME FROM OLYMPICS

Says Marathon Runners Dissatisfied With Methods of Coaches and Trainers

Joins in Demanding That Future Runners Be Permitted to Train Themselves

MELOOSE, Aug. 4.—The marathon runners, who represented the United States at the Paris Olympic Games, demand for themselves and their successors in the long distance event of future Olympiads the right of self-determination in training and conditioning methods. Clarence H. DeMar of this city, the American champion, who finished third at Paris, on his arrival at his home here said the marathon runners had agreed never again to submit to direction of coach or trainer in Olympic marathon contests.

Asserting that the showing of the United States runners was unsatisfactory, DeMar described a scene in the dressing room at Paris after the race. He was not so much involved in the criticism of conditions as were the other runners, he said, because he had trained as he pleased under agreement with Lawson Robertson, head coach of the American team.

"After the race all the members of the marathon team got together," DeMar said, "and held a consultation. We all agreed never to submit to a coach and trainer in any future Olympic marathon runs."

He said he believed that men selected for the team as a result of success in long distance running were themselves the best judges of their individual conditioning process, especially because few marathon runners train alike.

ERA OF BETTER FEELING IN AMERICA

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 4.—We are now entering upon an era of better feeling in the Americas, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American union, said as he opened his round table at the Institute of politics today. There is a growing conviction in Latin-America of the sincerity of purpose of the government and people of the United States, he added.

"International loans" was discussed by Dwight V. Brown of New York at the open conference conducted by Wm. S. Culbertson, vice chairman of the tariff commission. Mr. Morrow stressed the large part which the small investor plays in floating foreign issues and declared that the investment in such loans as the Japanese and Austrian represents the savings of "the plain old fashioned man who spends less than he produces and thus creates the fund without which all the plans for the reconstruction of the world will come to naught."

LA FOLLETTE TO DELAY ACTIVE CAMPAIGNING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Senator La Follette and his advisers are still undecided as to when they shall begin active campaigning. Indications, however, are that little will be done for at least a month, and that the time, meanwhile, will be devoted mainly to routine organization work. Advisability of Senator La Follette making his initial campaign speech on Labor day in some industrial center is being considered, it was said today, but some of his friends have advised him to wait until mid-September, and then to launch a drive for states that would be carried on intensively until election day.

Those who hold this view believe that six weeks of whirlwind campaigning will bring the appeal for support for the La Follette-Wheeler ticket to a peak just before election, while, if too much speech-making is made prior to that time, there may be a last minute let-down.

Speech-making itineraries are being arranged for Senator La Follette and his running mate, Senator Wheeler of Montana, but probably they will not be worked out in detail for some weeks.

EINSTEIN AND SMITH IN BIG LIQUOR RAID

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., August 4.—Jazy Einstein and Moe Smith, liquor sleuths, walked into the Grand Union hotel today, seized a quantity of alleged wines and ales and arrested two employees who were charged with violating the prohibition law by selling the refreshments to the crowds here for the racing season. The accused men will be arraigned tomorrow. Earlier in the morning Einstein and Smith raided a place on Lake avenue, where they made one arrest.

"JIM" LUCEY RUNS FOR REPRESENTATIVE

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—"Jim" Lucey threw his hat in the ring today. Known to the country as the ebullient-philosopher friend of President Coolidge, James Lucey of Northampton, finally yielded to suggestions of friends that he enter politics. Today he filed his papers for the republican nomination for state representative from the first Hampden district.

FORMER TELLER HELD
BOSTON, Aug. 4.—Charles Timbakis, former teller of the Commercial National bank of Youngstown, O., when arraigned in the municipal court today on a warrant charging larceny of $5000 from the bank, agreed to waive extradition and accompany Youngstown officers back to Ohio. He was arrested last week on the steamer Providence, when it put in here on route from New York to Athens.

HUNT N. Y. FIREBUG

Police Seek Pyromaniac Who Started Fires in Five Apartments

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—One hundred detectives and policemen today searched for the pyromaniac who started fires in five apartment houses of the upper west side Sunday, when two persons lost their lives and scores of families were driven from their homes.

The police are convinced that the man who started yesterday's fires on West 103rd street was the same who set the fire which caused the death of Mrs. Daniel Vaughn, wife of a minister of Watertown, N. Y., at West 92nd street last week. In all cases the fires were started by newspapers piled beneath stairways in the halls or cellars of the apartment houses.

Many families have left their homes because they feared the pyromaniac might pick their houses for his deadly deeds.

HANIHARA AT TOKIO

Japanese Ambassador to U. S. Returns Home—Denies He Was Recalled

TOKIO, Aug. 4.—(By the Associated Press)—Masumoto Hanihara, Japanese ambassador to the United States, on his return here yesterday from America said he did not know whether he would return to Washington. He declared that he was not recalled but came to Japan to discuss the situation arising out of the passage of the American exclusion act with Baron Kijuro Shidehara, minister of foreign affairs.

The ambassador expressed the hope that the coming elections in the United States would change the complexion of congress so far as Japanese exclusion was concerned. He declined to discuss the American act until he had reported to Baron Shidehara, but said the question could not be solved hurriedly. He did not expect that it would be taken up again before the American elections.

Hanihara said many members of congress had told him they regretted the manner in which exclusion had been enacted. He denied he erred in the use of the phrase "grave consequences."

The agitation which accompanied the passage of the exclusion act, the ambassador said, was dying.

While some Japanese in California were anxious, owing to recent incidents, the majority were not uneasy and were confident they would not be molested.

The ambassador predicted the election of President Coolidge.

KLANSMEN FAIL TO APPEAR IN COURT

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 4.—Albert C. LOOMFIXERS STRIKE AT CHICOPEE

CHICOPEE, Mass., August 4.—Sixty loomfixers of the Dwight Manufacturing company here went out on strike this morning in protest against a 10 per cent cut in wages which they understood went into effect today. The company resumed operations today on a four days a week schedule after two months of three-day schedule.

None of the other employees followed the loomfixers. Officials of the company decline to comment on the situation.

AUTHOR OF "FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS" DEAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Daniel Lothrop of Boston whose pen name was Margaret Sydney, died at a hotel here last night. She was the author of "Five Little Peppers," a series of stories of children. The funeral will be held today. She was the widow of Daniel Lothrop, founder of a Boston publishing house.

HELD FOR ASSAULT AND ROBBERY

MONTPELIER, Vt., Aug. 4.—A man who gave the name of Francis Speckleman of Keene, N. H., was arrested at St. Albans today for robbery of a garage here early today and assault on the aged watchman, S. E. McCarthy. The small sum obtained in the robbery was recovered. The watchman was not severely hurt. The assailant escaped on an early morning train, but was pursued and captured.

STERLING REACHES NEW 1924 RECORD

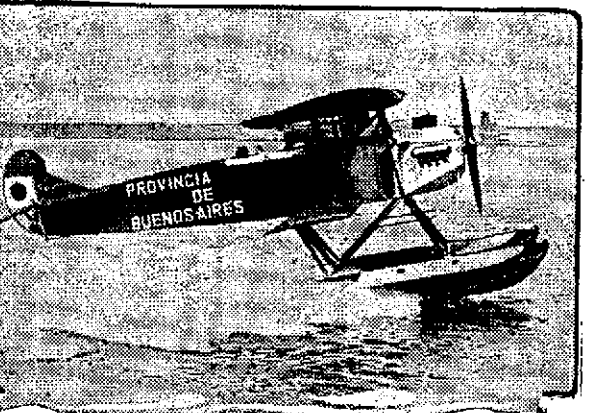

NEW YORK, August 4.—Further improvement in the outlook for a European reparations settlement, coincident with the departure of the German delegates to the London conference, carried sterling to another 1924 high record at $4.44 at the opening of today's foreign exchange market. The rate later slipped back to $4.44, about half cent above Saturday's close.

French francs moved up about three points to 5.31 cents.

Executive Council Today
Scrutinizes Records of Aspirants to Congress

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 5 (By the Associated Press).—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, whose endorsement of the La Follette-Wheeler candidacies and platform was accepted by the recipients yesterday, launched today into its announced campaign of participation in all national, state and local elections of 1924.

The council has picked its presidential and vice presidential favorites. Next it will scrutinize the records of aspirants to congress with a view to swinging the votes of labor to such republicans, democrats or independents as may have won the ratings "friendly to labor."

This is the program for today and, possibly, tomorrow. The national non-partisan political campaign committee of the federation did not wait until its endorsement of La Follette and Wheeler was made by the council before beginning its survey of congressional material.

Samuel Gompers, president, and Frank Morrison, secretary, of the American Federation of Labor, have been at it for months with two of their vice presidents, James O'Connell and Matthew Wolf.

Members of the executive council announced this morning they expected from the committee, some time today, a report and recommendations concerning congressional candidates, "which would be of great public interest."

"We undoubtedly will ask that many of the senators and representatives whom we endorsed in the last campaign and who are now in office, be returned to Washington," said Mr. Wolf. "We also will ask that we prevent the return to congress of certain candidates whom we helped to elect and who have failed to keep the faith with labor."

GERMAN ENVOYS REACH LONDON

Handed Protocol Embodying
Program for Putting Dawes Report Into Effect

MacDonald Asks Germans to Study Report and Express
Opinion Tomorrow

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press).—Premier MacDonald, presiding at a plenary session of the inter-allied conference at noon today, formally handed to the German delegation the protocol embodying the program of the conference for putting the Dawes reparation report into effect. He asked the Germans to study the report and be ready to express their opinions tomorrow.

The premier said he wanted to bring the conference to an end by Friday night. The session, which was held at the premier's official residence in Downing street, lasted but thirty minutes and was opened by a welcoming address delivered by Mr. MacDonald. The German delegates, headed by Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Finance Minister Luther, arrived in London at 3.30 a. m. prepared for the meeting, having familiarized themselves with the action of the conference committee while en route from Berlin. They were accompanied from Harwich by Dr. Gustave St. Hamer, the German ambassador in London.

Replying to Mr. MacDonald's welcome, Chancellor Marx said the German government had accepted the Dawes plan and was putting through the necessary legislation to make it effective. The German representatives, he said, hoped to maintain the friendly spirit of the original experts and hoped the allies would do the same.

A large crowd of curious persons had assembled at the Liverpool street station to catch a glimpse of Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Finance Minister Luther. The delegates were greeted by representatives of the British foreign office and were whisked off immediately in taxicabs to the Ritz, where they will be the guests of the British government.

Upon their arrival in London the German delegates, through their spokesman, Herr Specker, said they wished to assist in finding the best method of putting the Dawes report into effect without change and in the spirit of its author and that they would contribute their part to its loyal fulfillment.

Specker expressed the hope that the same spirit would be found in London, in which event, he said, there should be no difficulty in coming to a speedy agreement.

CITY COUNCIL WILL HOLD BUSY MEETING TONIGHT

A great mass of routine business is awaiting transaction at the meeting of the city council to be held tonight. In addition action is looked for the request of Joseph M. Dinneen that he be permitted to withdraw from consideration his nomination, by the mayor, for city treasurer. John F. McNabb has been named by the mayor as the next nominee to oppose Fred H. Bourke and his application will be read at tonight's session.

In addition there is still tabled the nomination of Charles J. Landers to succeed Fisher H. Pearson, holdover member of the board of health. Action is likely to be attempted on this nomination, although it is doubtful if the nominee has the number of votes necessary for confirmation.

There will be no nomination to the license board to succeed Joseph L. McGrath, holdover of two months, according to the mayor. The mayor does not feel inclined to act on this appointment until such time as the council is committed to record as to his nominations for the city treasurership and the board of health.

BROCKTON, Aug. 5.—The man living away from home appreciates mending service by laundries, usually. Merton L. C. McCullis, president of a laundry company here, told fellow members of a luncheon club of one instance when it was not appreciated. For three weeks, the laundry sewed new sleeves on shirts that came in with one sleeve gone. Then they received a note of thanks, but with a request that the service be stopped. The writer explained he had only one arm.

SIX CARS AND ENGINE TENDER DERAILED

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Aug. 5.—Six cars and the engine tender were derailed last night at 8.55 when St. John's-hurry and Lake Champlain mixed train, west-bound, ran into a wash-out just east of the Sheldon station. One woman passenger was slightly hurt. A section of the track 45 feet long was weakened by a heavy thunder shower which broke about seven o'clock. One passenger coach, mail car, milk car, and three freight cars left the rails. Line was cleared for traffic this morning.

OFFICER SENT TO STOP BOYS IN SWIM- ING, TAKES DIP

NORTH ANDOVER, Aug. 5.—The lure of the swimming hole attracts young and old, irresponsible boy and officer of the law, alike. When complaints came to police headquarters that boys were swimming in a favorite pool without clothing, Chief of Police Frederick J. Hawkes sent Officer Charles Ranby to stop them or see that they were properly clad. It was a hot day. The policeman was gone a long time. Chief Hawkes decided to drop around to the pool himself and see how things were going. He found the policeman and the boys getting along well together. All were in the water, and all their clothes were on the bank. Chief Hawkes announced Officer Ranby's indefinite suspension today.

NO EXCITEMENT IN LOCAL GREEK COLONY

Lowell's Greek-speaking citizens flourishing in the Market street section of the city, far from becoming excited today, as a result of the news relayed yesterday from Springfield, announcing the untroubling of Basilios Kompanoulos of Lowell, as a bishop of the Greek Orthodox church, are quietly discussing the latest turn the so-called "church leadership controversy" has taken. There are loyal supporters of the degraded church leader and also many strong opponents in Lowell's Greek colony. All are outspoken and emphatic when expressing their sincere religious leadership beliefs. To many, the untroubling of the bishop is looked upon as an outcast from the Greek Orthodox church. His aspirations in trying to institute the "Independent Greek Orthodox Metropolises of America and Canada" and to act as spiritual leader, are roundly condemned. On the other hand, Basilios Kompanoulos has numerous loyal supporters in Lowell, who are declared to be Greek "realists." The bishop arrived in America about a year ago, and soon came to Lowell and made this city his headquarters. He still resides in the Highlands district, journeying back and forth between Lowell and other eastern seaboard cities where loyal followers gathered in support of the "Independent" church. In discussing the case of the untroubling bishop, Bishop Alexopoulos of Boston, whose diocese comprises all of New England and the eastern part of Canada said that the bishop had settled in Lowell, "where he assembled a few powerful supporters and attempted to extend his influence." Kompanoulos has addressed Greek bodies in cities through the state and in other states, but according to Bishop Alexopoulos, "had not followed the tenets of his religion." The decisive action of the Greek supreme ecclesiastical court was taken on May 10th, but the official notice was not served upon Bishop Kompanoulos until last Friday night. He was located just before midnight in a room in a hotel in Springfield. In a statement issued last night in Springfield, the untroubling bishop declared that Bishop Alexopoulos "had no authority" over him, therefore "could not untrouble" him. He declared that he resigned from his old position with the church in Greece and that since coming to America, he has been "an independent." He declared further, that he "will file a bill in equity to enjoin the bishop of Boston from carrying out the order of untroubling." Bishop Kompanoulos has an official document signed by the secretary of state of Massachusetts, wherein he is authorized to conduct the affairs of the "Independent" church. It was said today that the Independent

ROBBERS ARE TRAPPED IN MINE

Three Men Suspected of $15,000 P. O. Robbery
Seek Safety in Mine

Sheriffs Armed With Rifles
and Shotguns on Guard—
May Use Sulphur

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., Aug. 5.—All last night a number of deputy sheriffs, armed with rifles and shotguns, remained on guard outside the Fallsade mine, in the hills back of this city, where three men suspected of having participated in the robbery of the Fallsade postoffice Saturday night when $15,000 in cash and stamps was taken, have sought safety.

The mine entrance, high up on the mountain side, was illuminated by spotlights and the surrounding area was lit by electric lights that had been strung during the day.

One of the three attempted a dash to Liberty Sunday night, but a volley of shots drove him back. Two appeared at the mine entrance yesterday afternoon, but another volley forced them to retreat. They made no attempt to escape last night.

A plan to force chlorine gas into the mine to force the men out was abandoned because there are more than five miles of tunnels in the property and use of gas was not feasible.

"Fugitives: This is to offer you an opportunity to give yourselves up and come out without fear of harm. We will see that you get an even break and a fair trial. We do not want to use severe methods to force you out, but unless you come out we must do so. Come to the main entrance and shout."

"Jeff Watson, sheriff."

There is no water in the mine, and it is believed that the entrapped men have little or no food.

If the men refuse to surrender, guards plan to set fire to quantities of sulphur at several points within the mine.

St. Peter's Orphanage Outing

Mayor Donovan was the umpire. Bag races, potato races and games were among the many entertainment numbers on the program. Rides on the hobby-horses provided the thrill of the afternoon and it was with reluctance that the children left this centre.

All in all it was the most enjoyable outing in the annals of St. Peter's orphanage outings and it was a group of 125 tired yet happy children which returned to the city.

The general committee in charge of the outing was as follows: Councilors James J. Hennessey, president of St. Peter's Orphanage association; William A. Hogan, esq., Charles J. Landers, Hon. James B. Casey, Chief Edward F. Saunders, John Donohue, William Daley, John V. Donohue, Fred H. Bourke, William McCarthy, David Burke, William Purcell, Arthur O'Connor, Charles Holmes, John Connor, John Barrett.

The following committee from the League of Catholic Women assisted in making the affair the pronounced success it was. Chairman Dr. Emma Y. Slaughter, president; Mrs. James B. O'Connor, Mrs. William Kearns, Mrs. John H. Connor, Mrs. Charles W. Holmes, Mrs. Joseph Green, Mrs. Edward Wilson, Mrs. James Casey, Mrs. Sarah Connolly, Mrs. Thomas Coleman, Mrs. F. Daley, Mrs. David Mahoney, Mrs. Fred A. Lamoureux, Mrs. John J. Regan, Mrs. A. Parent, Mrs. Edward F. Saunders, Mrs. B. J. Callahan, Mrs. Martin Maher, Mrs. William E. Ravindson, Mrs. Jennie Rediker, Mrs. George Alard, Mrs. James Brown and the Misses John Leaven, Genevieve Johnston, Eleanor Knobel, Catherine McEvoy, Mabel Haggerty, Esther V. Green, Elizabeth and Adelaide Gorman, Nellie Mullane, Annie Mullen.

The following local concerns and patrons donated prizes which were awarded the competitors in the various games: A. G. Pollard, Dickerman & McQuade, Talbot Clothing Co., Mrs. Charles Holmes, John Connor, A. Rousseau. Those giving the use of their cars for the outing were: Daniel Hogan, John J. Hogan, Fred H. Bourke, Judge Thomas J. Enright, John McDonough, Walter McKenna, William Rogers, Patrick O'Hearn, John Collier, James McManis, Mabel Haggerty, Mrs. McKay, John Sullivan, Fred Meloy, William Purcell, Philip Keen, Miss Mary Donohue, William Ryan, McCarthy Brothers, Margaret Hennessey, John Connor, Charles Holmes, 2 cars; William Daley, Chief Edward F. Saunders, James B. Casey, John Bourke, Dr. James O'Connor, William A. Hogan, Patrick Cox, Michael Casterly and John Leahy.

Death of Widow

Fund Provides for Park Development—$700,000 For
Lowell General Hospital

Through the death yesterday of Mrs. Amy F. Shedd, widow of Freeman B. Shedd, the Lowell General hospital will receive $700,000 from a trust fund provided in Mr. Shedd's will and the city of Lowell will receive $100,000 for the further development of Shedd park. Of the $700,000 which will go to the hospital, $100,000 must be used for the erection of a building for the care of patients suffering with incurable diseases.

Under the will of Freeman Ballard Shedd, who died in 1913, a trust fund was created from the residue of his estate amounting to about $1,000,000. The trustees were Alexis D. Sargent, Charles J. War and the late Mary Belle Shedd, who died a little over a year ago. The trustees were instructed under the will to pay to Mrs. Amy F. Shedd and to her daughter, Mary Belle Shedd, the income of the fund.

Upon the death of both of them, however, the will stated that the principal should be divided as follows: Berry school of Rome, Ga., $100,000; D. L. Moody school for girls at East Northfield, $100,000; City of Lowell, for the development of Shedd park, $100,000 Lowell General hospital, $700,000.

It is further stipulated in the will that the Shedd park development shall follow plans now in existence drawn out by Ernest W. Bowditch and that the $100,000 shall be expended under his supervision or his successor or successors in business.

GET ALLEGED THIEVES AFTER HOT CHASE

Closely "follow up" work on the part of Patrolmen Charles Sharkey, Miles Maloney and Police Chauffeur Charles C. Brown early this morning resulted in the arrest of three men charged with the larceny of an automobile fire. The arrested parties gave their names as Clarence Heffer of Highland street, Charles O'Hara of West Fifth street, and Myron Kaplan of Chestnut street.

The police were notified by telephone early this morning that a party of three men were acting suspiciously in the vicinity of Banks and Huntington streets. The three officers mentioned above made a hurried dash to the scene in a police automobile and when they reached the locality in question, the driver of the suspected car failed to stop when signalled to do so. Instead, he headed his car into that carrying the officers and then sped away. On Huntington street, the fugitive machine was overtaken and here the occupants threw an automobile tire into the street. Continuing to Tilgh and Oak streets, they were finally forced to give in at gun-points. One of the suspects launched an attack at Chauffeur Brown and later apologized, saying he did not know he was a police officer.

The three were taken to the station and booked on a charge of larceny. Kaplan was also charged with operating without lights, and in district court this morning, each of the defendants was continued in $300 until Saturday.

ANNUAL MUSTER AND FIELD DAY

Members of the republican town committee, to the eighth representative and eighth senatorial districts, have been called to meet at Westford town hall, tomorrow evening, to perfect plans for the annual "G.O.P. muster" and field day, to be held on Westford common, Aug. 23.

The day's program of entertainment will include a band concert, midday, ball games, sports and dances. Familiar orators of the republican party faith will be present to speak during the afternoon. Herbert Burbank of the republican state committee, will attend the special business meeting to be held in town hall tomorrow night.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE IS DISMISSED

In district court today, Emery E. Holt, driver of the automobile which collided with another machine at Chandler's corner in Tewksbury on July 16, was exonerated of a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Ada L. MacDonald, one of the occupants of the machine who died as the result of injuries sustained in the crash. Judge Pickman, who conducted an inquest some time ago, finds that death was not due to the criminal negligence of the defendant.

NEW SOCIETY FOR SOMERVILLE MEN

Now surety for Anthony Ingenito and Nicholas Deamico of Somerville was taken this forenoon by United States Commissioner Richard H. Walsh. Each man now is held in bonds of $1000 for hearing before the commissioner on Sept. 15. Ingenito and Deamico were arrested before the commissioner last week Tuesday, charged with liquor manufacture and possession of liquor following a raid by federal agents on a distilling plant in Burlington, where $10,000 worth of liquor and apparatus for its manufacture was confiscated.

Board Says Need of $57,500
is Due to Cuts in Original Appropriations

Juggling of Funds Necessary to Feed Horses in Ash
and Waste Departments

In a letter addressed to the mayor today the board of public service advises him it will need a supplementary appropriation of $57,500 to complete the 1924 work of departments
under its control.

The letter, signed by Dennis J. Murphy, chairman of the board, states that $57,500 additional is necessary because
of cuts made in original budget estimates in the matter of street department wages and also because no proper provision was made in the estimates
for caring for horses in the ash and
been purchased and it was found necessary to expend $1500 for a new street cleaning machine.

Letter to the Mayor

Chairman Murphy's letter, delivered to the mayor's office shortly after noon today, follows: "Your letter of July 30th, addressed to me, as chairman of the board of public service, received. I presented your letter to the board of public service and after several conferences,
on the matters contained in your letter, I desire, on behalf of the board,
to report as follows: First, I believe
the street department will need a supplementary budget as follows:

"In the matter of salaries and wages, in street maintenance, the
board originally asked for $253,413.25
and were finally appropriated $266,- 770.77, making a reduction of $25,- 642.49. The demands for street repairs and maintenance are constant and must be attended to, and your
board feels and believes that if complaints are to be attended to and
streets repaired, the street department will need, for the balance of the year, the sum of $26,000. In the matter of supplies and materials connected with the street maintenance program, the department will need
the sum of $20,000. The current expenses for materials and supplies
will average $5500 per month and
with six months to go will amount
to $33,000.

There will be an additional sum of $1000 for new horses, delivered but
not yet paid for, this makes a total of $37,000. There is a balance, now on hand to the credit of the department
amounting to approximately $17,000, hence the need of an additional sum of $20,000.

In the ash and waste department,
there will be needed $10,000 for material and supplies and for new horses, hought and not paid for. Last year, the horses of the ash and waste de-

LEOPOLD MENTALLY DISEASED

Matter of Which Boy Struck Fatal Blow With Cold
Chisel Remains Puzzle of Trial—Dr. Healy Says
He Did Not Know Which One Killed Franks Boy

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dr. William Healy of Boston, second psychiatrist, testifying for the defense at the hearing to determine punishment for Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, Jr., for kidnaping and murdering Robert
Frank, testified today that the crime
was "the direct result of Loeb's diseased motivation," and that the observation of the youths in the courtroom had confirmed his opinion from examinations that they are mentally
diseased.

Cross-examination of Dr. Healy began by Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, seeking to bring out the basis of a "childish compact" between Loeb and Leopold and the hearing,
upon suggestion of the defense, was
not generally heard, the witness testifying in a low voice only for
the court and the stenographers.

The matter of which boy struck the
fatal blow with a cold chisel remained
the puzzle of the trial when Dr. Healy
on cross-examination after a fifteen-minute reference to his notes of examinations, said that he had not been fortunate in killing the Franks boy, and did not know.

(By the Associated Press.)—The American army airplanes on their world flight hopped off from Hornafjord at 3:15 o'clock this morning, for Reykjavik, on the west coast of Iceland.

The United States cruiser Raleigh, which has been on station here attending the fliers, proceeded to sea, with her destination, probably Reykjavik, where Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, the flight commander, will decide upon further plans for the flight.

At 10:25 o'clock the fliers passed Skattaro, seventy miles west of Hornaf-jord, flying in a strong gale.

Also at this noon's meeting wage increases from $34.01 to $37.33 per week were voted the following six inspectors in the water works department: Edward T. Boyle, W. L. Mc-Cann, J. F. Gulligan, John T. McCabe,
Daniel F. Mahoney and Michael J.
Rogers.

Healy said that "on account of Loeb's abnormal mental life, particularly on account of his twisted emotions as an evidenced and then his pathological absence of feeling about his own misdeduct, on account of his pathological split personality, and on account of the fact that it is unthinkable that a boy of the lovable qualities that endeared him to both sexes inside and outside his family circle, so carefully planned this monstrous deed unless mentally abnormal. I am forced to conclude Loeb has a thoroughly diseased mental life, an abnormal split personality."

Dr. Healy asserted that in his mind the crime was the direct result of diseased motivation, that the planning was possible only because of abnormal methods, that the deed was the direct outcome of Loeb's emotional life, that his phantasy life had continued over many years and that his abnormal personality was on-cured by the coincidence of the coming together with another abnormal personality.

Dr. Healy said his compensation was $250 a day.

tack on the defense alienist's testimony

All Ready for the Big Outing at Canobie Lake

It was a long time from reveille to
the hour of departure for the children of St. Peter's orphanage, or at least it seemed so to the 125 youngsters who went on the annual outing to Canobie
Lake today. Although the first machine which was to number among
the 35 drove up to the door about 9 o'clock, the procession of cars did not leave the city until 10:30 o'clock.

At each bank of an automobile horn
the youngsters who were in the assembly hall ran merrily to the front
windows anxious to see who the patron was. The height of gaiety was reached, however, when favors and bags were distributed among the children. Shrieking horns and sweet-toned horns, paper hats, vari-colored "shakers" and all sorts of noise-making contrivances provided much pleasure to the little ones as they awaited the official signal of departure.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the automobiles drew up to the entrance of the orphanage and as one was filled it proceeded to St. Margaret's church where the procession started for its trip to Canobie lake by way of Fox square

and the Lawrence boulevard, led by Motorcycle Officers Andrew Hunter and Frank Murphy. Preceding the long line of cars rode Rev. Charles J. Gal-
livan, pastor of St. Margaret's church,
accompanied by the mayor.

Previous to the departure of the cars
which transported the children to the park a large truck loaded with the

goodies left for the amusement center
where tables were arranged ready for
the youngsters when they arrived.

Shortly before noon the children were served a bountiful luncheon by the ladies of St. Margaret's parish, after which an extensive program of sports
was enjoyed. A baseball game between the "Southpaws," captained by Raymond Fremont and the "St. Margaret's All Star Boys" team, under the leadership of Edward Flanagan, was staged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Mrs. Frank T. Tinney announced today that she had determined to sue for separation from her comedian husband, whose recent arrest and hearing on charges of having administered a beating to Imogene Wilson, a Kollies girl, caused widespread attention.

"I've had all I can stand," Mrs. Tinney said while process-servers were seeking her husband on the steamship Columbus, on which he was to sail for Europe today. "I've tried to play on the level with Frank and he's a good fellow and a regular pal. But you can only use a postage stamp once, and I guess that about describes me."

Mrs. Tinney added that papers asking the separation already had been prepared and would be filed later in the day. She said she would not seek a divorce.

CONDITON AT HOSPITAL

Was Seriously Injured in Automobile Accident in West
Chelmsford—Three High School Girls Also Injured—
Driver of Car Only One to Escape Injury

As result of an automobile accident
in West Chelmsford at about 10 o'clock last night, Edward Sinnett, aged about 18 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard A. Sinnett, 27 Fairfield street, is in a very critical condition
at St. John's hospital. His major injury is a fractured skull and early this afternoon he had not regained consciousness.

Three Lowell high school girls, passengers in the machine, who are at the hospital with injuries that are not serious are: Myrtle Bigelow, 167 School
son, 238 Dutton road, bruises and laccerations, and Jean Palmer, 220 West-worth avenue, slight facial abrasions.

The driver of the car, William Milne,
143 Westford street, escaped injury.
The machine is owned by his father,
Fred H. Milne.

The Milne car was returning from

Lake Nabasset to Lowell and was between West and North Chelmsford
when a man on a bicycle was seen on the road just ahead. Milne attempted to pass on the left of him, but when
the bicycle swerved in the same direction, he was forced to swing sharply
to the right and ran off into soft sand
on the side of the road and overturned.

Persons living nearby assisted in
righting the car and caring for the injured young people until the ambulance from Lowell arrived, when they were taken to St. John's hospital.

G. Buel Palmer, father of the Palmer girl, who was slightly injured in the
of the young people knew of their whereabouts last night and had allowed them to go in the Milne car for a ride as far as Lake Nabasset and return.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—The negotiations between the representatives of Great Britain and soviet Russia have broken down and the projected treaty will not be signed, it was announced this morning by the foreign office.

The British and Russian delegations
were in session all night until 7:15
o'clock this morning, the announcement said. The soviet representatives

were unable to accept the amendment and concessions offered in regard to article 14 of the draft treaty. No agreement could be reached, it was stated, and the negotiations broke down.

The Anglo-Russian conference in London was convened on April 14 after recognition of the soviet regime by the labor government under President Lloyd George.

LOCAL ROTARIANS VISIT
BOY SCOUTS IN HUDSON

Hudson Centre, N. H., was the happy rendezvous selected for Lowell Rotary club members' afternoon motoring excursion this day and evening—an inviting trip of rural charm from Rotarian headquarters on Dutton street nearly to the north over the state line into the vacation country.

Lowell Boy Scouts, by the healthy, tanned leaders, who have been living in the open for several weeks, partaking of Dame Nature's finest offerings in rare programs of entertainment and physical training exercises, will be eagerly waiting on the entrance road leading from camp for the approach of the vanguard of the clubmen.

Rotarians planned to rally on Dutton street at 5 p. m. and make the start north on time. A sizable delegation of boys' work supporters planned to go. It was expected that 25 automobiles would be in the line-up, and possibly more than that, if all members received the handsome blue letter calls issued yesterday in good so-

ALLEGED FUR THIEVES FIGHT EXTRADITION

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—The men who were arrested in New York last week for the Boston police on a charge of breaking into the store of Edward F. Kakas & Sons, Inc., on Boylston street, say they will fight extradition. Since their arrest, a woman who gave her name as Ella Morris, said to be the wife of one of the men, has been taken into custody.

Inspectors Joseph Rollins and Timothy Donovan of police headquarters, who have been in New York a few days, have just returned to this city.

It was stated at headquarters that the greater part of the loot, which was identified by the Kakas firm, has been returned. Though five trunks filled with furs now say that there is still another trunk full of furs that has not been recovered. The whole lot, it was said yesterday at police headquarters amounted to at least $100,000.

Inspectors Rollins and Donovan, who have been praised by Supt. Crowley for their excellent work in tracing the loot from the Back Bay depot in five trunks to New York city, have been in consultation with Chief Inspector John R. McGarr and Capt. Ainsley C. Armstrong. They say that Joseph Marks and James Bruno are being held in New York in $5,000 bail and Mrs. Morris in $25,000.

The New York police are unwilling to allow John Behrman to get away from them.

According to the information given to Capt. Armstrong by inspectors, Behrman is alleged to have taken part in a fur robbery in New York a little more than a year ago. Behrman was arrested in connection with that robbery and defaulted $10,000 bail. Inspectors Rollins and Donovan say a policeman was shot dead at the time of the New York fur robbery.

Evidence in the Kakas fur robbery case will be presented to the Suffolk grand jury within the next few days.

ENJOY TRIP TO WHITE MOUNTAINS

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ohlson of West street have returned after a very pleasant trip to the White mountains. Their itinerary included a tour as far as Franconia Notch, and they returned by way of the North shore. Next Sunday, Mr. Ohlson and Christopher Stratos, one of the proprietors of Marie's lunch in Gorham street, will leave for a trip to Canada.

Fire late yesterday morning destroyed the three-car garage of Claude J. Harvey of Bridge street, Dracut, and slightly scorched the rear of the Harvey home. The prompt arrival of the Dracut fire apparatus saved the house from being badly damaged. The garage was empty when the fire started, two large trucks and a touring car being sheltered there nights only. The cause of the fire is unknown. There is insurance.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

RIALTO THEATRE

There are a number of outstanding features in "The Unknown Purple," now playing at Loew's Rialto theatre. One of them is the remarkable manner in which they have handled the purple ray of light about which much of the story revolves. The ray of light is the discovery of an inventive genius, and the possessor of it has the power to make himself invisible to the human eye. Beside that, the splendid acting on the part of not only the principals but every member of the cast alone makes the picture worth the trip to the Rialto. Harry B. Walthall, Alice Lake and Stuart Holmes, the principal members of the cast, give as gripping and human characterizations as have ever been seen on any screen. In support every member of a really all-star cast, including Helen Ferguson, Ethel Grey Terry, James Morrison and Little Frankie Lee, does excellent work.

It is the story of the justified revenge of a man who, with the power to make himself invisible, comes back from the prison to which he was sent for seven years by his faithless wife and her lover. He has gained money and power through his inventive genius, and there, with his great secret he uses against those who betrayed him, until he brings them to the edge of financial and physical ruin, and there he leaves them, far enough into the depths so they can never rise.

Tom Mix in "The Wagon Trail" is the associate feature and is chockful of action from beginning to end. The story takes place in the old frontier days, and Mix is seen as a member of the Pony Express. Thrilling skirmishes with roaming bands of Sioux Indians and in which Mix does many of his well known stunts, are the features of this picture of covered wagon days.

A Buddy Messenger comedy, entitled "The Tenderfoot," and a Fox News conclude the program.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

Vividly picturing a story of American life familiar to all who know and diagnose the whims and ways of the small town with its atmosphere gay and dull and its mixture of "high-toned" and "just common" folks, "Babbitt," Sinclair Lewis' typical American family story now depicted in moving picture drama, is the feature attraction at Merrimack Square theatre the first three days this week. Lewis is the author of "Main Street," widely read and admired.

The production of "Babbitt" calls for lavish expenditure of money in abundance. The scenes are realistic, the story runs along smoothly and engaging the attention of the audience until the end. It is vivid in his genuine presentation of life in a hustling, self-asserting town whose inhabitants aim high and often fail. The story is not new, but it is told in a new and novel way that reveals many truths of striking interest when surveying "Main Street" and all its vanities and foibles, as it really is. In the leading roles are Carmel Myers, Willard Lewis, Mary Alden, Raymond McKee and Kathleen Myers.

Another lively and enjoyable feature picture at the Merrimack Square, for the first half of the week, is "George Washington, Jr.," an adaptation from George M. Cohan's patriotic play of the same name. Wesley Barry takes a most delightful part in the pictures—the leading role, in fact. The supporting cast, includes Gertrude Olmstead, Otto Harlan, Edward Phillips, William Courtwright, Charles Condit and Leon Barry.

The rollicking story is laid in the capital and in historic Mt. Vernon. The boy actor in the role of George Washington, Jr., has many exciting experiences after discovering a questionable count and a band of conspirators, bent upon stealing "the

Here Are the Reasons
We Advise Buying Furs Now

Even tho we will have to carry 70 per cent of the purchases until December 1st and guarantee the prices to be lower than obtainable in November!

Because—

The finest furs are made early in the season, when the manufacturer can secure the finest pelts—

Made carefully—matched beautifully, because during the summer months only the more expert furriers are at work—the rush season help are laid off. The pelts are matched by experts who have plenty of skins to match up, and who work carefully, as all artists do.

Because—

Prices are lower because the manufacturers work on a closer-margin—with manufacturing costs greatly reduced. N. B.—We sell on a closer margin during August.

We would advise buying Furs in August for quality alone—and with the added saving in money it is surely profitable!

Because—

We can afford to sell at a lower margin—Our regular salespeople are not very busy—we can hold a sale at this time without hiring extra salespeople.

Because—

You get better service—from our most experienced salespeople—that you could not get in the rush season.

Fine Quality Fur Coats

If there is one article of wearing apparel that must be purchased with confidence, that article is a Fur Coat. No other thing is so subject to clever adaptations of poor quality material. Your only protection is the integrity of the firm from which you buy.

Without complete assurance of the quality of the merchandise full satisfaction can never come to the wearer. There can be no doubt when you select a fur garment at the Bon Marche. Your purchase can be made with that absolute confidence that creates full mental satisfaction.

The Bon Marche has never, for the sake of an attractive selling price, put out a garment that was below the very exacting standard of first quality which we maintain. We value too highly the confidence of our clientele. The integrity of this store, the years of successful merchandising, are behind each individual purchase to the fullest extent.

We guarantee every coat we are offering to be the best quality in each kind of fur. We guarantee every skin perfect or we will replace it at any time. Every coat in this sale is up to the Bon Marche standard of quality.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., August 5.—Governor William S. Flynn today sent to Governor Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts, a letter characterizing an "unpleasant" and intended to "insult" the officials of Massachusetts from blame or implication in the outrage which has been perpetrated upon the officials of Rhode Island, the investigation into the arrest of Rhode Island assistant attorneys general by Massachusetts constabulary at Rindland, Mass., on July 19.

BIDS OPEN ON SCHOOL PLUMBING

Eleven bidders competed today for the job of plumbing at the Sycamore street school. Bids were opened by Inspector of Buildings John E. Maynard at 11:30 o'clock. The low bidder was the firm of Quikley and Harrington at $1550 and the award of the contract was immediately made.

Other bidders: Ronche and Co., $1815; John H. McGinnis, $1837; J. Mullane, $1737; W. H. McElroy, $1664; Daniel J. Leary, $1593; John E. Drury, $1755; Charles Hanchett, $1932; John A. Cotter Co., $1812; Welch Bros., $2498; J. J. Spillane, $1977.

NARROWER SCARFS

Scarfs for fall appear to be a trifle narrower than those for summer, but shawls have lost none of their size or their brilliancy of color and design.

More Money is Required

Department were fed out of the street department appropriation, no provision having been made to feed them. This year, the horses were fed out of the appropriation for ash and waste collection. Considerable money has been spent for horse hire and it will be necessary to continue to hire horses until such time as the board has a sufficient appropriation made to purchase horses to equip the entire department.

In the matter of sewer maintenance, the board will need $1500. At the present time, there is a balance of $172.60 in the credit of sewer maintenance. The board found it necessary, this year, to purchase a new sewer cleaning machine for $1500. The purchase of this machine was not foreseen at the time of the appropriation. This machine has already saved the department several hundred dollars.

The board, at the present time, is working on figures connected with the entire department and will immediately submit to your honor a full statement as to the expenditures of the money and progress of the work in the street department.

Respectfully submitted,
DENNIS J. MURPHY,
Chairman, Board of Public Service.

Last Night's Meeting

In an effort to get today's statement ready for the mayor, members of the board of public service, assisted by the office staff of the street department, the superintendent of streets, the assistant superintendent of the water department and the city engineer, labored long last night in a struggle with the mass of figures representing the financial activities of the department for the first seven months of the current year. The meeting, called by Chairman Dennis J. Murphy at 9 p. m. was for the purpose of preparing an intelligent and comprehensive answer to the letter received last week from the mayor and asking definite data as to the progress of the department, both financially and materially.

DAVIS AND SMITH MEET

Presidential Candidate Not
to Interfere With New York Governor's Plans

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—John W. Davis, democratic presidential nominee, and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York conferred here yesterday, but the subject of the governor becoming a candidate to succeed himself was not discussed.

Mr. Smith previously had made up his mind not to offer himself for re-nomination and with this knowledge at hand Mr. Davis did not urge him to do so. The nominee had stated before-hand that the decision was one left solely with the governor.

Mr. Davis and Gov. Smith canvassed fully the situation in New-York state and the east. They were closeted for more than an hour, having lunch in a private dining room.

"Mr. Davis and I are in fair accord on the plan of operation to be submitted to the board of strategy," Gov. Smith said. He added that he would not begin to campaign for the national ticket until after Labor day and that his plans had not been fully developed.

The speaking dates of the presidential nominee also are held in abeyance. It was stated yesterday on behalf of Mr. Davis that he had no engagement beyond that at Clarkstown, W. Va., for the delivery of his acceptance address one week from last night.

Coolidge Works on Speech
WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Completion of the campaign plans of the republican party will await the acceptance speeches of President Coolidge and John W. Davis, the democratic nominee. Party leaders here say they will not regard the campaign as definitely under way until they have an opportunity to assist the reception of the speeches by the opposition and the public.

All members of the national committee are expected to be here for the formal notification of the president to be held the night of August 14.

Meanwhile, President Coolidge is devoting as much attention as possible to his speech of acceptance. Because of this and the usual cabinet meeting this morning, his engagement list was kept down to a minimum.

La Follette Delays Campaign

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Senator La Follette is planning to let President Coolidge and John W. Davis, the democratic presidential nominee, lead off in the campaigning. He intends to reserve further comment on issues until both have discussed them publicly, and then, later in the campaign, to state his position with vigor.

This strategy meets with the approval of La Follette's advisers, who pointed out today that it fits with his decision to forego the customary formal notification ceremony which occasions a speech from the nominee.

TRAVEL MEDICINE CHEST

What sort of a medicine chest should be carried on a vacation?
Mr. Mann began to wonder after he had packed up his flivver and made ready for the "open spaces."

Now, most healthy people take a little medicine with them and a little sunburn ointment and let it go at that. It isn't a good idea to pack a medicine chest along on an excursion intended for health, unless ordered to do so by the doctor.

However, there are one or two things that may be taken along for precautionary purposes.

Todine swabs, in handy packages, may be purchased at almost anywhere. In case of accidents involving cuts, etc., these are most useful things to have along, as immediate cleansing can be insured.

There are other handy first-aid packages to be had, but one small iodine outfit is about as good as anything.

Also, if you are fearful of snakes, a "first-aid" preparation is not to be had at drug stores and sporting goods places. A serum infection is generally contained in this package, which is so small that it can be carried in a vest pocket.

A little gauze and cotton may be taken along if desired, though in any simple emergency a clean handkerchief will do.

With the possible exception of some mild catarrhs, this is all an average person should require.

DEATHS

WHITELEY—Francis Whiteley, a well known and highly respected resident of this city for many years, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 934 Gorham street, after a long illness. He leaves behind his wife, Elizabeth (Petrie) Whiteley, one son, Francis W. Whiteley, and one daughter, Mrs. Joseph Stavely, all of this city; two sisters, Mrs. Alexander Petrie and Mrs. Thomas Butterworth; two brothers, Joseph H. and Robert Whiteley, all of England, also several nieces and nephews and seven grandchildren. He was a member of Royal Arcanum and the International Iron Molders' union.

mier MacDonald in fulfillment of what was virtually a campaign pledge. The purpose of the conference was to settle all the outstanding claims between the two countries, some involving pro-war debts on the part of Russia and others growing out of the soviet government's seizures, under its nationalization policy, of property belonging to British subjects.

The Russians made efforts to secure a loan, which they desired the British government to guarantee. This guarantee the British flatly refused to give. MacDonald declaring that the British would not demand recognition of Russia's pre-war debt as a prerequisite to any advance.

The Anglo-Russian treaty negotiations collapsed, according to authoritative information, on the refusal of the soviet representatives to accept an article in the agreement which they insisted left the way open for England eventually to demand compensation for foreign property nationalized by the soviet government. In other words, the explanation runs, it is a flat clash between communism and capitalism, although there had been many evasive discussions of other features of Article XIV, which the Russians found objectionable.

nold, his mechanic, took the air first. Lieut. Eric Nelson and Lieut. John Harding, Jr., in the New Orleans, followed a moment later. They circled the harbor for a moment, waved farewell, and then headed along the Iceland coast toward their destination.

It was the best day since the Raleigh arrived, with the sun shining brightly over the glaciers and no trace of fog. From the north came a stiff breeze which it was felt might somewhat impede the progress of the planes, but the reports from the destroyers stationed along the route indicated excellent visibility with a calm sea.

As on the day the planes arrived, the entire population of the little village gathered today to wave farewell to the flyers, and the only hotel in town was filled to overflowing with farmers from up-country who came to wish the bird-men good luck.

Naval Patrol on Guard

ABOARD U. S. S. RICHMOND, Aug. 5.—(By Wireless to the Associated Press) Every precaution is being taken by the naval patrol to guard the two remaining U. S. army airplanes in their short flight, scheduled for today, along the south coast of Iceland, from Hoen Hornafjord to Reykjavik, preparatory to the hazardous hop to Greenland.

The U. S. S. Raleigh will remain at Hoen Hornafjord, where the "New Orleans," piloted by Eric Nelson, landed from Kirkwall, Scotland, on Saturday, and the "Chicago," commanded by Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, on Sunday.

The destroyer Billingsley was due early today at a point off Portland, the destroyer Reid is stationed 20 miles east of Reykjavik, while the Richmond is due to arrive at Reykjavik at 2 p. m. The course of this vessel will take her along the coast for several hours, so the flyers will be further guarded if they get an unusually early start. The distance of the flight is slightly more than 300 miles.

Lieut. Leigh Wade and his mechanic, Sergeant Ogden, who are aboard the Richmond, are rested after their trying experience of Sunday in which they lost their plane, the "Boston," after a forced landing at sea on the way from Kirkwall to Hoen Hornafjord. They appear most concerned over the loss of their machine, which they had hoped to salvage for mental reasons, even if they never flew it again.

strings gathered up and everything ready for the getaway early. The Rotarians will not take along their meal tickets, nor provide meals for the scouts, it was learned today. That suggestion, first approved, has been abandoned, but Rotarian Ed Mellen, scout executive and able superintendent of the present scouts' encampment at Hudson County, declares that the boys desire to act as hosts today.

The 1924 summer camp is a branch of boys' work that Lowell Rotarians are deeply interested in. Today's trip to Hudson is to see how nicely the present camp is functioning. Scout Mellen plans to have the camp visited by Rotarians, who will inspect its every nook and corner. Sports and drills were on the program, also. Inspection of quarters will also be made. Mr. Mellen was prepared to explain everything about the work being performed in every branch of the scouts' summer outing camp.

Several Rotarians left a little earlier in the afternoon, all others preparing to leave the city promptly at 5 o'clock. The early starters for the most part are vitally interested in the summer activities of the boy scouts. For those Lowell business men who "made" Hudson Centre before 2 p. m., there were water sports programs, "very special." Those who preferred to go in bathing brought their own suits and towels.

Mr. Mellen planned a real program for the Rotarian visitors who journeyed to Hudson via Vermont avenue. The return to Lowell will be made in the late evening.

RECEIVER DENIED
NEW YORK, August 5.—Supreme Court Justice McCardell today denied an application for appointment of a receiver for the Rockwood Hall Country club near Tarrytown.

Harold Boller, who said he originated the plan for the club, had charged that the Tarrytown Realty syndicate, which he organized, had been deprived of its interest in the club after 14 members of the syndicate had subscribed $25,000 in return for which they were to receive a profit of $50,000 and life membership in the club.

The president of the club is Frank H. Hittcock, former postmaster general.

K. OF C. CONVENTION

5000 Members Attend Mass

at New York Cathedral

Which Opened Session

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Five thousand Knights of Columbus attended a solemn high mass at St. Patrick's cathedral today, which formally opened the 42nd annual international convention of the order. The mass was celebrated by Bishop Daniel J. Curley of Syracuse.

Bishop William Turner of Buffalo, one of the national leaders of the Catholic hierarchy, made Americanization the keynote of his sermon, and praised the work of the Knights. His conception of true Americanism was described as "to fear the anger of a just God, to respect all law, to revere all authority."

After the mass, the delegates marched down Fifth avenue to the Waldorf Astoria, where the convention will be in session until Thursday afternoon.

Aside from delegates from the 48 states of the union, others in attendance are from Canada, Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, Philippines, Hawaii, and the Canal Zone.

John Burton Payne chairman of the American Red Cross, presented to the Knights a life-size oil painting of the late Pope Pius X. He said he had bought the portrait in Mexico city, and declared that the Knights and the Red Cross were co-workers in both war and peace.

Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty, after making his annual report, received from Roman Missioner Edward L. Hearn, the special Papal medal struck by order of the Vatican and containing an inscription to the Knights of Columbus in memory of their $1,000,000 American welfare work in Rome, written by Pope Pius XI.

CONDITIONS IN EUROPE

Continued Progress Depends

on Acceptance Report,

Says Goldsmith

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 5.—Continued progress in Europe depends on the acceptance report, according to Col. Alan C. Goldsmith, chief of the European division of the United States government of commerce and a technical adviser of the Dawes commission.

"There is no alternative," said Col. Goldsmith, who spoke today at the Institute of Politics. If the report is accepted, he declared, there will be nothing to fall back upon except the status quo which "at the very best would mean continually multiplying obstacles and obstructions to economic progress" and at the worst, perhaps, financial chaos and economic collapse in Europe with its inevitable repercussion on the world in general."

Both experts stated that the undeveloped emotion side of the youths' personalities overshadowed their mature intellects to the extent of making them incapable of resisting committing the crime which they built up in their childish phantasies.

The prosecution feared so far in attempts to turn the hearing into a jury trial on an insanity plea in preparing rebuttal evidence of its own allies to show that the slayers were intellectually capable of plotting the mental irresponsibility defense theory.

FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE DAY DEMONSTRATION

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—The committees who will have charge of the National Defense Day demonstration in each of the New England states, except Maine, were announced today by Major General Andre W. Brewster, commanding the First Corps Area. Governor Baxter of Maine has declined to name a committee.

At the same time the plans for the mobilization of forces in this state were made public by Governor Cox.

At eight o'clock on the night of September 15, every national guard unit will meet at its armory for an hour and a half of drill. Where there are no national guard units, the commander of the American Legion will be in charge. Organized reserve skeletons will be recruited by their officers as if for national defense. Local organizations to the organizations will be obtained for the day only. Mass meetings of civilians may be held. Spanish war camps, G.A.R. posts, former state guard organizations and draft boards are being asked to take part in the grand patriotic demonstrations. Parades may be held where desired.

The number of persons who participate is to be reported to the adjutant-general.

Massachusetts—Brigadier General Jesse P. Stevens, adjutant general; Major General Edward L. Logan, commanding the 26th division; Brigadier General Richard K. Hale of Boston; Brigadier General Alfred Foote of Boston; and Brigadier General Thomas Freley of Worcester.

Rhode Island—Brigadier General John J. Richards, adjutant general; Brigadier General Herbert S. Lane; Colonel William M. P. Dowen, Stephen J. Casey, George W. Troy.

New Hampshire—Brigadier General Charles W. Howard, adjutant general; James W. Renick, Clarence B. Carr.

Vermont—Brigadier General Herbert T. Johnson, adjutant general; Major Harold F. Sheldon, Major Nathan C. Peterson, Captain John R. Fowler.

Toured British Isles

ent normalcy in England is comparable with the apparent peace in Ireland, but beneath the surface there are rumblings that cannot be overlooked.

"The most outstanding economic feature in England today, aside from the generally increased costs of living, is the tremendous income taxes the government exacts from its people," said Mr. O'Donnell. "These taxes are a great deal heavier and more burden-

some than ours and are apparently to continue for some time, and yet I did not hear one word of complaint from people who have to pay them. They admit the tax burden is an aftermath of the war and accept it stoically and without complaint.

"Englishmen agree and admit that England has practically no chance of collecting from Russia and other European nations any of the money it pledged to pay. The United States on her loans and the empire is digging deep into its own pockets and resources to meet these obligations."

Mr. O'Donnell did not find any evidences of active industry in England and felt conditions there to be about the same as in this country today. There is a considerable amount of ship building and the construction of locomotives and railroad cars and equipment for the Japanese, Argentine, and South Africa, but the textile business apparently is no better than in the United States. It is told him that the woolen trade shows signs of life, but still is far away from boom proportions.

The outstanding feature of the political situation in England today is the fall from grace and public esteem of David Lloyd George and Mr. O'Donnell said that the London press is directly outspoken on the subject. "Lloyd George is not in good standing today," he said, "and the general impression seems to be that he is living up to the designation of 'political mountebank.' He is making many speeches, but is in constant dispute and turmoil with government officials and members of parliament. The press comment is to the effect that it seems a shame that a man who performed so brilliantly for the cause during the days of war should drop so suddenly in public esteem and confidence."

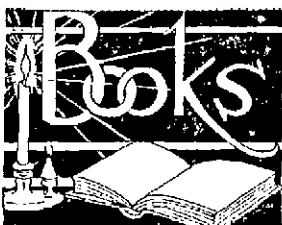

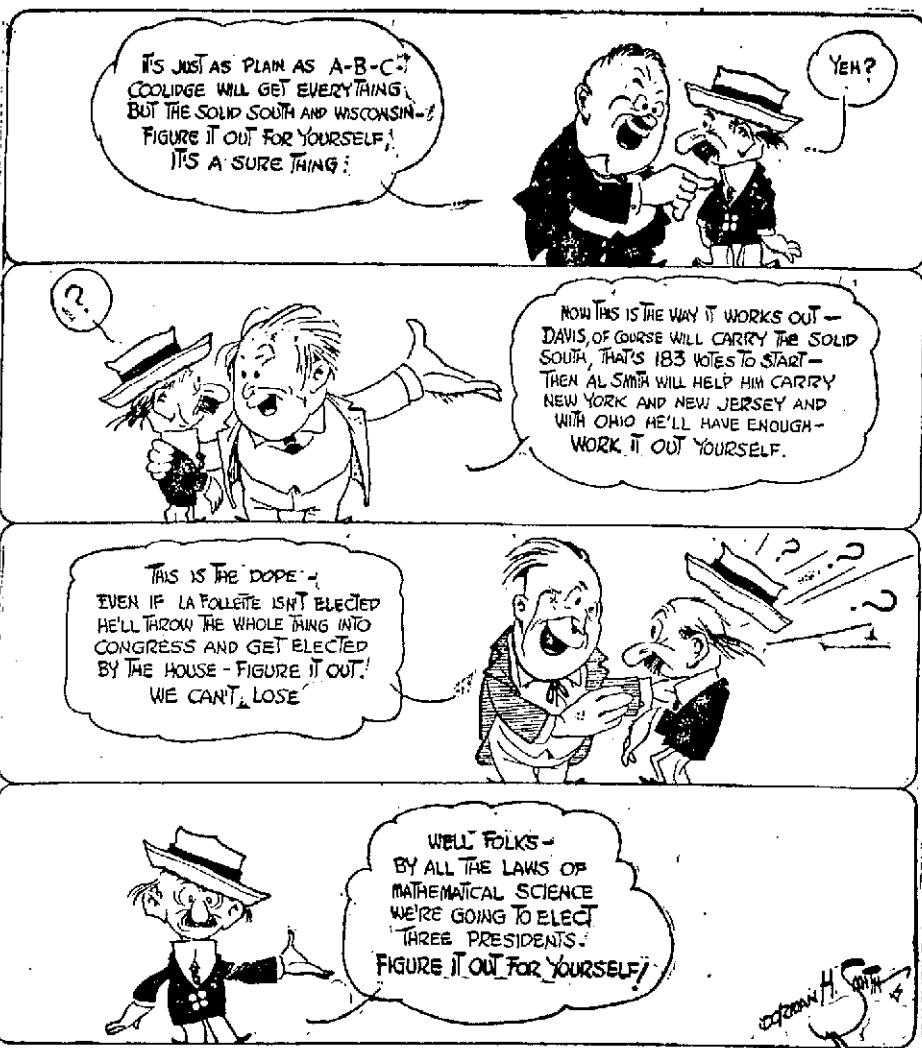

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell spent ten days in Ireland and were there when DeValera was released from prison after 14 months of confinement. On the surface Ireland is peaceful, but only on the surface, Mr. O'Donnell said.

"It is of great importance, however," he continued, "to know that upon DeValera's release he made the statement that he feels the time has passed for the republicans to make military advances against the Free State government and now urges parliamentary means of procedure rather than by force of arms."

There is a tremendous amount of tourist travel in England at the present time, despite high railroad tariffs and the beautiful lake region of Scotland continues the magnet to attract thousands of pleasure seekers. Speaking of their ocean trip, Mr. O'Donnell said that both passages were made on water as calm as the proverbial mill pond.

IT'S A WONDERFUL YEAR FOR THE PAD AND PENCIL EXPERT

BY THE N.E.A. BOOK SURVEY

One must thank the war for a new type of fiction work now becoming rather plentiful. It is the mystery novel, based on adventures of secret service agents. In it figures a new note—hypnotism. Combine adventure with the occult, and you will come pretty close to describing this new school.

To it belongs the latest John Buchan novel, "The Three Hostages" (Houghton, Mifflin). It depicts another chapter in the life of Sir Richard Hannay, British secret service agent, but now retired.

He has had his bit of adventure in previous Buchan books, and in the first chapter of this one, is content to settle down on his English estate with his beautiful wife and their small boy. But of course this would never do. So Buchan conceals a wild conspiracy in which Bolsheviks and hypnotism figure. Three persons, members of prominent American and British families, are kidnapped and held as hostages. Authorities come to Hannay and beg him to set his hand to work to free them. They must be free by a certain day, because then a round-up of the conspirators will come, and unless the hostages are free, it is feared their death would result.

Hannay accepts readily. How he succeeds makes the delightful story. Growing youths will be absorbed in the tale.

Buchan is a born story-teller. He enslaves the reader and rivets the eye to the printed page.

A sketch of the life of the author proves as entertaining as his books. John Buchan was born in 1876 of an old border family; he was educated at Glasgow university and Brasenose college, Oxford, where he graduated with honors after winning many of the college prizes.

In 1907 he became a partner of Thomson Nelson and Sons, Limited, and later stood for his home county as an unionist candidate for parliament. At the outbreak of the World War he was recommended and by 1915 was lieutenant-colonel and for a time liaison officer between the British and French armies.

In 1916, Mr. Lloyd George appointed him director of information in the British foreign office, a position which he held until the end of the war.

BY HARRY B. HUNT, N.E.A. Service Writer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The presidential election next Nov. 4 may be important, historically, far beyond any election since the Civil war. It may become a mile-post, marking a very definite point in American affairs.

This importance lies not in the remotely possible election of Senator La Follette to the presidency.

It lies not in the recognized possibility that the election may be deadlocked and the choice of a president thrown into congress.

It does not even lie in the virtual certainty that an "independent" balance of power will be returned in the new congress.

The really important possibility in the coming election is that it will place on a secure and permanent footing a new national party—a "third" party sufficiently strong and aggressive to sit in at the national political game on terms of equality with republicans and democrats.

Despite the fact that Senator La Follette and his followers have disclaimed the formation at this time of a new national political party, running simply as "independents," in protest against the platforms and policies of the two old parties, it is none the less true that there is an underlying hope, even an expectation, that a new national party will be born of the struggle in the coming campaign.

Although such a new party might properly be classed as "liberal," with both old parties grouped under the definition of "conservative," it is unlikely that any coalition between the remaining groups in the republican and democratic parties could be effected which would unite them under a common head against the new "liberal."

The result would be that, for an indefinite period, at least, three major parties instead of two would contest for supremacy in every national election.

NATIONAL DEFENSE DAY

A. F. of L. Denounces Militarism and Pacifism—Not Involved in Controversy

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press) Denouncing both militarism and pacifism, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor today refused to become involved in the national defense day controversy.

The attitude of the council toward national observance of the day will be one of strict neutrality. It is announced, however, that "Defense Day is a matter of lay, and most labor men will feel that our military establishment may participate properly in the exercises."

and during a convalescence he wrote "Thirty-Nine Steps" and "Greenmantle."

"I have amused myself with writing," he says, "ever since I went to college. At the age of 16 I published an annotated edition of Bacon's 'Essays.' I published several novels and a book of essays at Oxford."

Rifle-shooting is a favorite diversion, but in the matter of fishing he declares himself "mild."

"Seward's Polly" (Little, Brown) contains a theme from which an American epic might be made—the Alaska purchase romance. Edson Marshall, who wrote it, chooses to make it a cheap historical novel of little quality. Secretary Seward and Jefferson Smith, his agent in the Alaska deal, converse in the fashion of movie titles, as follows: "His eyes looked straight into Jeff's. 'I am a rebel. I cannot give my services to the enemy that conquered me. No, Mr. Seward, I would rather starve.' There is plenty of this 'you ain't done right by our Nell' stuff in the book."

Grasshoppers are plentiful in Australia, but fishermen probably keep them on the jump.

The result of a tri-party, instead of a bi-party, system would introduce difficulties that, if long continued, might force far-reaching changes in our elective machinery and legislative processes.

For instance: Should there be three strong, permanent parties, it would be virtually impossible for any presidential candidate over to obtain a majority in the electoral college.

This would force, ultimately, a change in the method of electing the president—possibly direct elections, instead of through the medium of electors—since it is not likely the country would long stand for elections being thrown regularly into congress.

No less a political partisan than George Lockwood, editor of the National Republican and former secretary of the republican national committee, declares that a general overhauling of our political and legislative machinery must result if three party groups are to hold a balance of power in congress and in national elections.

The importance, then, on the permanent political history of the United States, of the present "independent" movement, far outweighs its immediate effect in the present campaign.

It, as its supporters maintain, the "independent" movement is not a La Follette movement primarily, but finds its strength in fundamental economic and civil conditions instead of in the personality and persuasiveness of any individual, then any considerable strength developed in this year's campaign is almost certain to be crystallized into the nucleus for a new national party.

If the La Follette candidacy is personal, rather than fundamental, then there's no use worrying about the troubles to come in a tri-party system.

But just which it is no two groups will be able to agree until the votes have been cast this fall.

TRESCHEM-TEPLITZ, Aug. 5.—This is the height of the market season here, the market in which girls of marriageable age wait for husband-customers. Here at this bathing resort the summer marriage mart has become an established institution. The war created an overbalance in the population, women far outnumbering the men. And so the girls of Teplitz, seeking husbands and homes, display themselves in rows along the street. Dressed in their best they sew and knit, to show prospective husbands that they will make thrifty housewives.

Tariff Commissioner Says
Hoover Never Tried to
Exert Influence Upon Him

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 5.—Secretary Hoover never in any way tried to exert influence upon William S. Culbertson, vice-chairman of the Tariff commission, said Mr. Culbertson today. He is attending the Institute of Politics here and was commenting upon the reported charge by Senator La Follette that the secretary of commerce had sought to influence the commissioner with regard to sugar duties. "Senator La Follette," said Mr. Culbertson, "is reported to have said that Secretary Hoover brought pressure upon me to change my views as a tariff commissioner upon the sugar duties. I cannot believe that the senator reported correctly, but if he made such a statement, it was based on information which is absolutely false. Mr. Hoover has never in any way tried to exert influence upon me. No one has been a more sympathetic supporter of scientific tariff-making than Mr. Hoover, and it is absurd to suggest that he would seek by personal or political influence to interfere with the judicial application of the law. No denial of the charge accredited to Senator La Follette should be necessary to the American public, which has come to know and to rely upon the high standard of public morality which guides the secretary of commerce in all his acts."

BOLSHEVIK BAND RAIDS
POLISH TOWN

WARSAW, Aug. 5. (By the Associated Press.)—A Bolshevik band, armed with machine guns and bombs, has raided the Polish town of Stolpce (Stolpce, southwest of Minsk), say dispatches just received. The raiders released the prisoners from the jail, and pillaged the postoffice and railroad station, smashing the telegraph and telephone instruments to which the news was not transmitted to Warsaw until the affair was over.

The cabinet has been recalled in special session to consider the recurring border raids, of which the latest is said to be one of the first examples.

EVERETT CHILD

EVERETT, Aug. 5.—Running across the street in front of a car operated by Henry J. Wells of 2 Poplar street, 34-year-old Everett Child, 3 Orient avenue, was struck and almost instantly killed last night. The accident occurred at the corner of Bow street and Langdon street.

Wells said he was driving up Bow street and that at the corner he saw a group of children playing. One of them, he said, ran across directly in front of his machine. The radiator struck her, knocked her down and the car passed over her body.

Wells picked the girl up in his arms and carried her into the police station, where she was pronounced dead by Dr. John F. Williams.

Wells was placed under arrest on a technical charge of manslaughter and released in $1000 bonds. Witnesses of the accident say that Wells was not going at an excessive rate of speed.

OUR PERILS ON THE HIGHWAYS

The alarming state of affairs resulting from the frequency with which drunken drivers are found in charge of high-powered autos on the highways, has induced Judge Enright to decide upon a jail sentence in addition to a fine for every such offender brought before him in the district court. The judge is entirely within his legal authority in so disposing of such cases. Moreover, it has been found that the courts cannot properly cope with this evil in any other way.

The perils of using the highways under present conditions must be removed or at least minimized. Much is expected of the recess committee of the state legislature, appointed to make a study of motor vehicle conditions with a view to recommending legislation that will promote safety on the highways. The committee is to make a tour of a number of states for the purpose of making a study of the laws and traffic conditions, with a view to adopting what is best calculated to solve the traffic problems and at the same time reduce the number of serious accidents which have already attained most alarming proportions.

Without leaving the state, however, the committee might readily see the necessity of much greater care in the granting of operators' licenses. There is no denying the fact that thousands of people are licensed to run motor vehicles who from one cause or another should never have received such privilege. Some of them do not possess the mental equipment that every operator must have to run a motor vehicle without endangering the lives of the public. Others, however, get by without an adequate knowledge of the essential points in operating an auto, and strange to say, imbeciles, drunkards, bandits, crooks, bootleggers and a variety of other criminals find no difficulty in securing such licenses.

It would appear, therefore, that the registrar of motor vehicles should investigate the habits, standing and intelligence of applicants for operators' licenses, much more carefully than has been the custom. It seems that by this means the reckless, the unfit and the criminal might be prevented from becoming a menace on the highways. It is true, that the registrar is quick to revoke the license of any operator who is convicted in court for reckless driving, or who is found guilty of violating the motor laws in other respects. But the vast number of such revocations would indicate that poor judgment was exercised in licensing of many of these operators in the first place.

There is here ample room for reform and one that would be fruitful in promoting safety and sanity in the operation of motor vehicles. If the applicant can fool the examiners he will assume that he can evade the other motor laws with equal success. The time has arrived when drastic methods must be adopted to stop the auto slaughter as a result of wild and reckless driving and the total lack of a proper sense of responsibility for the strict observance of the laws provided for promoting safety on the highways.

If Registrar Goodwin refuses to grant operators' licenses to unfit parties, and if the other district courts follow the example of Judge Enright in giving drunken drivers jail sentences, then we shall soon be relieved of one of the greatest perils now encountered on the highways.

THE ULSTER CRISIS

England is once more face to face with the insurgency of Ulster. The issue at present is the settlement of the boundary between Ulster and the Free State.

The treaty under, which the Free State was established provided for a commission of three, one member appointed by the Free state, one by Ulster and one by Britain.

Ulster voted herself out of the Free State in virtue of the power given her by the treaty, but she refused to have the boundary question settled by allowing Donegal, Tyrone and Fermanagh to vote themselves into the Free State on a referendum, as provided in the treaty.

Premier MacDonald has taken up the matter and submitted the legal aspect of the case to the privy council for an opinion. That body which corresponds to our supreme court says it will be necessary for the British parliament to pass a bill providing for a commission to settle the question regardless of the wishes of Ulster. This measure would be equally binding on both.

Ulster now, as in 1914, when she threatened revolt if home rule were granted Ireland, threatens open resistance to the proposed attempt to fix the boundary line. It remains to be seen whether the present premier will bow to the wishes of Ulster as did Mr. Asquith, when he said in the face of a threatened rebellion, "It is unthinkable to coerce Ulster."

As a result of the policy thus introduced, troubles followed thick and fast in Ireland, and apparently there are more coming. Unless Ulster is coerced into acceptance of a fair settlement of the boundary issue, it is quite likely that the Free State would repudiate the treaty on the ground that England herself had failed to carry out its provisions.

THIRD TICKET ENDORSED

Contrary to the general expectation, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in session at Atlantic City, has endorsed the candidacy of La Follette and Wheeler, the former as an independent republican, and the latter as an independent democrat. The committee wishes to make it clear that it based its action upon the past record of both men and that it does not endorse their platform, nor the radical groups by which they are supported. Nevertheless, the fact remains that La Follette and Wheeler meet the socialist party with withdrawal its national ticket and pledged its support to the La Follette ticket. Thus the A. F. of L. will find itself in rather bad company in supporting the third ticket despite the fact that the leaders assert that their action is strictly non-partisan.

But in such cases political support for a candidate means support for the principles he represents.

It is to be regretted that the committee did not wait to hear what Mr. Davis will have to say in his speech of acceptance. The democratic party in the past initiated and secured practically all the principal labor reforms that have been enacted in this country and in the future, as in the past, it will stand for the best interests of labor. The charges that it represents monopoly or big business or that it is controlled by Wall Street are untrue.

Dangerous Smiling

The sympathetic visitor to the hospital stopped at the bedside of a pale young man swathed in bandages. "Cheer up," she said, unctuously. "Keep smiling; it is the best medicine." "I'll never smile again," replied the battered one, sadly. "I'll never smile again—not at another fellow's girl."

Some Short Skit

A heavenly young lady sent to one of the large mail-order stores for a sport skirt. Upon receiving the bundle she noticed that it was particularly heavy. She spoke of this fact to her mother, who remarked that this house always did their bundles up well. However, she proceeded to open it and the first thing she found was a quantity of excelsior, next five pounds of raisins and before she got through she had all the ingredients of making home-brew.

Not Much of a Joke

"In vain—in vain!" cried the young man, distractedly. His face was deathly white and his damp hair hung in wisps about his forehead. A crowd gathered. "In vain—in vain!" he cried again, wringing his hands and gnashing his teeth. "What!" cried the curious crowd. "What is in vain?" "The letter 'V'!" cried the young man, jumping on a passing omnibus.

Old Home Town

London taxi driver, putting on a sport to reach a railway station at a certain time, ran down a cart, upsetting the contents. A policeman, confronting the taxi driver, demanded his name. "Michael O'Brien," came the reply. "Indeed," said the policeman. "That's my name, too. Where do you come from?" "And so do I," now just stand there a moment, while I go over and charge this man with backing into 'ye."

Cave of the Crow

You can't blame the crow for not being white under all the circumstances. He has been exploited as an unsympathetic bird, dish along that it is really no wonder. It is true that since he is traditionally bad, he may well be so in fact. Mrs. Kral Schlotz keeps a rooming house on New York's west side, and, being up to date, she has installed a radio set for the education of herself and guests. Next door to her is a bird hospital, one inmate of which is a brunette crow. Mrs. Schlotz's radio worked assiduously during the democratic national convention. So did Miss Pope's crow. Every time the radio raucously revealed, as a starter, that "Alvin-krim-mun" casts twenty-four for "Cindy" and maintains a times first and last, and extending over a period of weeks—the crow would stretch its somber neck and wreek the air with a "Haw-haw-haw! Caw-caw-caw!" Mrs. Schlotz's indignation progressed to snarled nerves, but the crow continued to reveal in derision of his probable and prospective political traducers. So he was summoned to court with Miss Pope. The court, however, at once recognized that exclamatory utterances are a crow's by divine right and no written statute may abridge them. In addition, the man who had maintained the tradition traced forcefully in behalf of the accused bird, and, at this point, Miss Pope believed she had Mrs. Schlotz eating crow. But only for a moment. The court added that it would be advisable to hold the case open and inquire further—harboring a crow in a place might be unethical, he opined. Then, was Mrs. Schlotz to turn to crow, tentatively. So the case pending. Meantime, black days for the crow, who must wait with little expectation of that justice that always has been denied his kind. He may lose his happy home or he may die for his caws. His not to reason why or which. Only can he, living, find satisfaction in that he seized a fine opportunity to evade party politics; or, dying, go out with the hope that he will be as unsavory as politicians affect to believe. Even a soul forever enveloped in darkness may be thus appeased.

A Song of Duty

Sorrow comes and sorrow goes,
Life is flecked with shine and shadow,
Now the tear of grieving flows,
Now we smile in happy hour;
Death awaits us every one,
Toiler, dreamer, preacher, writer,
Let us, then, ere life be done,
Make the world a little brighter.

Burdens that our neighbors bear,
Easier let us try to make them,
Faints, perhaps, our neighbors wear,
Let us do our best to break them;
From the straitened hand and mind
Let us loose the binding fetter,
Let us, as the Lord designed,
Make the world a little better.

Selfish brooding scars the soul,
Fills the mind with clouds of sorrow,
Darkens all the shining goal
Of the sun-shining tomorrow.
Wherefore should our lives be spent Daily growing blind and blinder—
Let us, as the Master meant,
Make the world a little kinder.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

If you saw youngsters on the streets today with coats, dogs, rabbits, mice and other living creatures do not think that there has been a sudden trend toward zoology manifested by Young America. For today is "Pot Day" at the playgrounds and the youngsters all brought pots of some nature, everything from fleas to garden snakes in an effort to win the prizes offered.

The prizes were pocketbooks, rings, watches and all sorts of such trinkets purchased direct from Woolworth. Many of the pots brought could do tricks and so there was a miniature circus at every playground in the city this afternoon.

MIDDLESEX NORTH POMONA GRANGE

Middlesex North Pomona grange will soon officially open its fall and winter season of fraternal and social meetings. Grange programs invariably include a number of special features of attractiveness, promoting good fellowship, offering entertainment of wide variety that lure the faithful to the rallying places of the grange clubs.

Membership in all local grange organizations in this section of Middlesex county, is "holding up well," district directors and headquarters statisticians say. Lowell grangers have always prided themselves in supporting one of the largest and healthiest organizations occupying first position in the New England grange directories. There is not the slightest evidence today that support of the local grange and Pomona organizations is dwindling. As a matter of fact, grange officers report that the 1924-25 official programs will eclipse in interest and values all progressive efforts that have been provided in the past to keep the Patrons of Husbandry organizations vigorously flourishing up and down the New England line.

The 1924 program covering the remainder of the present year, has already been planned. Members are now possessors of well-printed, color-board covered manuals, each containing a handy list of names of each and every city and town grange local. The booklets prove extremely useful to members and friends, who may want to be informed about fraternal matters incidental to grange new officers and old; location of meeting places, names of all committees, topics for coming lodge meetings, official visitations dates, anniversaries, patriotic observance dates and programs, and also a complete list in each manual of grange meeting dates and time of meetings.

But the stellar feature of the present summer season is the grand Pomona automobile excursion to Milford, N. H., where Middlesex North Pomona and Hillsboro Pomona of Milford hold their gay reunion and field day, with programs of splendid offerings for the delight of young and old.

The annual outing in Milford takes place on Thursday, Aug. 7, if the weather be fair, and starts at 10.30 a. m. standard time, in the heart of historic Milford where enthusiastic all-the-year-round Pomona grangers abound in impressive numbers. The automobile trek from the Lowell Pomona grange district to the festival fields where Hillsboro faithful flourish so abundantly and in friendly setting, will be participated in by grangers from Lowell, Chelmsford, Braintree, Tyngsboro, Billerica, Burlington, Dunstable, Westford and Westford. The first three granges are handling all transportation arrangements.

The Hillsboro hosts and hostesses plan to have program of sports and special features in the morning. There will be an automobile parade, starting at 10 o'clock from a convenient location outside the town and a sweep through the town's main streets, with music, flags and fraternal banners. The parade will be followed by athletic games and contests. The "basket luncheon" will be served at 1 p. m. In the afternoon, an orchestra of reputation will give a concert on the green-sward.

Distinguished grange speakers are coming from points near and far. New Hampshire state grangers will be largely represented, for transportation to Milford both by railroad and state highway is excellent.

MEETING OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

The American Legion met last night at Memorial Auditorium, ratifying the list of nine delegates and a like number of alternates elected a week ago to the state convention at Pittsfield. It was voted to send flowers and letters of appreciation to Police Superintendent Thomas R. Atkinson. It was also voted to publish the next issue of the post paper in September.

ROBBERY MOTIVE FOR "LUMBER" IN BOTTLES

KILLING OF WIDOW

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press)—The belief of the Mexican government that robbery was the principal motive for the killing of Mrs. Rosalie Evans, the British subject who was shot to death from ambush near Texmelucan Saturday night, was reiterated in an official foreign office bulletin issued yesterday by five federal prohibition agents.

The freight car which purported to be loaded with lumber, was in the Crescent street yards of the Boston & Maine. Federal agents looked over the bill of lading on the car and soon found that the "lumber" was consigned to a person who did not exist in Chelsea.

Investigation showed that the lumber was as fictitious as the label, for inside a slight screen of lumber were piled the 300 barrels of ale. Each barrel contained three dozen quarts which, at present, are valued at about $1 a quart, retail.

A "tracer" was put out on the car and, according to the latest reports, the car had been traced as far as northern Vermont.

DERAILED EXPRESS TRAIN RAMS STATION, FOUR PERSONS HURT

Boston-Newport Express, Off Tracks, Runs on 100 Yards at Stoughton, Sideswiping Shanty and Gates—250 Passengers Escape Injury

STOUGHTON, Aug. 5.—Jumping its track, the Newport express, speeding toward Boston at 30 miles an hour late yesterday afternoon, bumped along 100 yards of ties, narrowly missed striking the brick roundhouse, tore off the front of the flag shanty, injuring a man inside and the crossing-tender, and stopped when the first baggage car fell against a coal car three tracks to the left, and the locomotive, swinging to the right, dove full length into the front of the Stoughton station.

No one was dangerously injured. Frederick P. Stucko, the engineer, and J. W. Brown, fireman, were taken from the wreckage of their locomotive, suffering from many bruises and cuts. The two men hurt at the crossing are hardly more seriously hurt.

Four Girls Escape
Four little girls in the women's room of the station were barricaded in the room when the locomotive stopped its plunge less than a foot from their door and debris jammed the gap. They broke a window and jumped out, crying, but unhurt.

The engineer and fireman were treated by Dr. H. Henry Leavitt and sent to Forest Hills hospital. Dr. H. Ewing, associate medical examiner, attended Robicheau and Lyons and sent them home.

Henry L. Hall of Boston, the baggage master, who had been in the second baggage car, helped the conductor, C. B. Thompson of Dedham, to lead some 250 passengers, bruised and frightened, but calm, out of the five coaches, in none of which a single window had broken.

Firemen, Police Called

The accident happened about 4.35. Immediately after the locomotive plunged into the station, both the fire and police departments were notified and the whole town rushed to the scene. The arrival of fire apparatus and other autos jammed the vicinity of the station and square and firemen and policemen together worked to keep the streets leading to the station clear of traffic.

The train was made up of five passenger coaches and two baggage cars, the first one being blind. From Taunton to Boston it is an express. By the time it reached North Easton it was traveling at an estimated speed of 30 miles an hour.

Baggage Car Derailed
About 100 yards south of Stoughton station, the train passed over a switch and about 15 feet further on, the derailed baggage car went off the tracks first at this point, but to the right of the tracks in a zig-zag.

In the bounding and zig-zagging, ties were torn, the road-bed damaged and spikes holding the track plates to the ties were loosened for a distance of more than 1000 feet. At a point near the small roundhouse, which is situated about 150 feet south of the station, the right rail started to give way and tipped to the right at an angle of about 45 degrees.

It was about here that the second baggage car containing baggage men Henry L. Hall of Boston and A. G. Woods, went off the tracks.

Shanty Ripped Open

The locomotive apparently started to go off the tracks at this point also, for there were deep furrows along the road-bed from this point on to the station.

In leaving the tracks, the locomotive passed the roundhouse, swinging to the right and barely missed it. It struck the stone embankment glancingly and then struck the crossing tender's shanty, which is on the stone embankment of the hut. One side was torn away.

In the shanty at the time was Michael Lyons of Canton street, West Stoughton, a night watchman at Moode Rubber Company. Lyons had dropped into the shanty on his way to work to pay a call on Florin Robicheau, the crossing tender.

As the locomotive struck the shanty, taking away most of the contents including a small stove, Lyons was struck by pieces of the debris and was injured about the legs.

Crossing-Tender Felled

Robicheau, who lives up Wyman st. about 50 yards from the crossing, was standing at the control post of the crossing gates. He had the gates lowered. The carting engine, tender and baggage car, struck the control post, knocked the crossing gates into splinters and scattered them in all directions. Debris struck Robicheau in the left side and knocked him down. He was showered with dirt, rocks and splinters and received numerous cuts and bruises.

Continuing, the train crossed the Wyman-st. crossing. About half-way across Wyman st. the locomotive started to list to the left. It crashed through the stone wall of the station and into the women's waiting room, destroying everything in sight, and came to a stop at the door of an inner room.

Crash Heard Over Town

A deafening roar, accompanying this crash could be heard all over town. The steam cylinders on the locomotive were punctured as it went through the wall of the station. This undoubtedly saved the engineer, Frederick P. Stucko, of 2 Parkton road, Jamaica Plain, from a scalding. The steam escaped through the holes and filled the partially demolished station.

Just as the locomotive was about to strike the station, Jeremiah W. Brown of Foxboro, the fireman, jumped from the cab. When the engine stopped, it tipped over on the left side, where Brown had been stationed.

The tender steered around past the station structure and overturned. The connections between the tender and the first baggage car snapped and the baggage car leaped across the tracks. The forward end of the baggage car crashed into a coal car. The baggage car blocked all traffic on the tracks for several hours.

James H. Sullivan, of 253 Harrison avenue, Boston, a former member of the state police patrol, who is now on his vacation here, sitting in his machine which had stopped at the crossing gates to allow the train to pass. A piece of the gate struck the front of the car.

Parking his car close to the station, he left it and together with Forrest Vanston, nephew of the chief of police, rushed into the demolished section of the station and helped Engineer Stucko out of the wreckage.

The passengers left the coaches quietly. None of them reported any injuries and none was treated by local physicians. A train, bound from Boston to Newport, took them back to Canton, where they changed trains again and were taken to Boston.

Girls Panic-Stricken

The four little girls, Philomena Barbato, 10, and her sister Mary, 11, both of 21 Wyman street, and Antoinette Ginnasa, 8, and her sister, Annie Ginnasa, 9, of 940 Washington street, became panic-stricken when they opened the door of the washroom and were met with steam and smoke. They shouted and screamed, but their cries were not heard.

Philomena Barbato was the first to regain her composure and she broke one of the windows of the washroom with her hand, receiving a slight cut in doing so. She broke away enough of the window so that all four were able to crawl through it.

Investigation Today
About three hours after the accident,

wrecking crews from Readville and Taunton reached the scene and started to clear off the tracks. Before the workmen started to work, members of the crew of Engine 1 of the local fire department, laid a chemical fire and put out the fire in the firebox of the locomotive. The wreckage was not entirely cleared away at midnight.

The little gray stone station was built in 1888. With a locomotive in its waiting room, its huge radiator thrown from the center of the room against the back wall, its floor ripped out and its benches tossed in all directions, the station inside was damaged to the extent of thousands of dollars.

New Haven railroad officials said late last night that it is too early for them to make an official report of the cause of the accident. The ordinary procedure is for the division superintendent to investigate the wreck the day after and make a report. The superintendent in the Providence division is George A. Poore.

There was much comment on the fact that the station platform, which had been filled with passengers five minutes before the wreck, awaiting a local train, were empty when the accident occurred.

HEARING BEFORE MASTER

An action of contract, whereby Charles F. Crafts seeks to recover commissions alleged to be due him from Ray Stanton for the sale of two automobiles, was begun today at the Gorham street court house before Attorney Frank Goldman, sitting as a master. Richard B. Walsh represents Mr. Crafts, with Edward J. Tierney and John A. Crowley appearing for Mr. Stanton.

BURIED IN SAND SLIDE

William J. O'Connor, 46 Church street, employed as a laborer by John Brady, was buried in a sand slide at the Brady pit off Stoughton street, this forenoon. He was given first aid treatment by fellow-workers and taken to St. John's hospital in the ambulance. He was found not to have been seriously injured, however, and was discharged.

The meanest man in the United States ate a green apple so he could keep the family awake all night.

Attractive Lawn Party to Be Held Thursday Afternoon and Evening

A lawn party that promises to be a very attractive affair in every respect will be held Thursday afternoon and evening on the grounds of the Gilmore residence in Middlesex street, North Chelmsford. Bernard F. Gilmore is general manager of the enterprise. He is being ably assisted in his efforts by a committee composed of different members of St. John's parish, all of whom are determined to make the coming celebration a big success in every respect.

In the afternoon there will be special attractions for the children, the principal feature of which will be a pageant given under the direction of Miss Ruth Ward. Other amusements will be provided to give the children a real pleasant time. The grown-ups will also be given every opportunity for a good time in the evening. There will be music and open-air dancing in addition to numerous other features, including what is being planned under the direction of Mrs. B. F. Gilmore. But a lawn party without booths would be similar to a turkey dinner without dressing. Therefore, arrangements have been made to have a number of booths located at different parts of the common lawn. From amongst the number of attendants will be eager to attend to the wants of the large crowd that is expected to be present.

From all accounts, the decoration and the illumination of the lawn in the evening will prove an attraction in itself. This part of the arrangements comes under the personal care of Mr. Gilmore, who has given the assurance that these grounds, which have already been the scene of many successful gatherings, will present an appearance that has never been equalled in the past. Not alone excellent. Therefore, if the weather man is only on his best behavior on that day, there is every reason to believe that this lawn party, which is being held under the auspices of St. John's parish, will prove a big financial success, as well as a social event that will prove a credit to the promoters.

Tonight at the Commodore ballroom "Mae" Hallett and his orchestra will play for dancing featuring all the latest in dance music and played in a manner which will surely please. The orchestra is composed of eleven first class musicians and each one is an artist. During the evening, specialty numbers will be offered by members of the team and the evening's entertainment will be worth the price of admission. Dancing will be by check with a small admission of 10 cents being charged.

"Mae" Hallett will not appear at the Commodore again for several weeks, this evening's engagement concluding his summer contract at this resort.

ELECTED HEAD OF WESTFORD SCHOOLS

Charles D. Carter has been elected superintendent of Westford schools. William C. Rodenbush will supervise the high school and the following new teachers have been appointed: Clara Perry, high school commercial department; David Hamblen, Newton, science and mathematics; Hiram Taylor, Worcester, assistant; Edward M. Sterling of Everett, principal of Nassau school; transportation of school children; Nashoba district, Albert Hildreth; Parkville district, Clarence Hildreth; Brookside, Perley B. Wright; North End, George Burke; Forge Village, John B. Gray and Joseph G. Walker; Graniteville, Carl Lydiard.

NEW FIREARMS LAW

Advocated as Result of Carrying Pistols

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—Publication of the fact that 15,991 permits to carry firearms have been issued to civilians alone by local and state authorities this year has aroused considerable comment. There are many who believe that there should be some sort of action taken to prevent an indiscriminate approval of the possession of deadly weapons by citizens.

It is pointed out, however, that unless the law is amended little can be done to check the practice. Under the statutes there are many authorities from whom permission may be obtained to carry a pistol. It is now within the power of a judge of a court, a trial justice, the board of selectmen and the state commissioner of public safety or "persons representing them."

There is little doubt but that the legislature will be asked next session to pass legislation that will curb the licensing power. One suggestion has been made that the present statute be amended in order that each license before it is issued shall have the joint approval of the local authorities and the state authorities as well.

Checking Plan Suggested

It is not improbable that there will be a recommendation offered to the incoming general court to require an applicant to have as endorsers of his application two reputable citizens. At present no such endorsement is demanded. The suggestion is further made that after the local justice, chief of police or whatever official issues the permit the applicant then submit it to the commissioner of public safety, who will issue, but not endorse.

The plan would make it equally imperative that the local authorities approve a permit issued by the department of public safety. In that event neither side would be slighted, as the commissioner of public safety had permitted one of its citizens to carry a gun and if the order of procedure was reversed, the public safety commissioner would have known of local conditions.

A study of the reasons given by applicants who have already received permits from local authorities shows an unusually large number of permits granted for "business reasons." No other purpose for the application is given.

Reasons Varied
Scores of cards say that the permit is desired for "self protection," but no additional information is added, leaving those who do not know the applicant to puzzle over his need of fortifying himself with a revolver.

Some places, it is shown, have been so cautious that they have issued permits to their own policemen. This is quite unnecessary under the law but shows that the selectmen are alert and taking no chances.

In other places where the records disclose an excessive number of permits, the reasons are little short of surprising. Here are some: "Protection of myself and family against a vicious dog in the neighborhood; Milkman, market gardener, stable keeper, traveling with expensive instruments, business principles as undertaker, electrician, master mechanic and school teacher, all for self protection."

Do Own Police Work
Officials who have studied lists of the reasons, including those given above, have observed that some of these people appear to be acting for themselves when the police should be doing it for them. They say that any local authority who expects citizens to

MRS. DON C. SEITZ DIES

AT PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 5.—Mrs. Mildred E. Seitz, wife of Don C. Seitz, business manager of the New York World, died last night at St. Barnabas' hospital, following an operation. She had been passing the summer, as had been her habit, at Summit Spring in Harrison.

Mrs. Seitz was the daughter of the late John B. Blake of the East Deering district, where she was born in 1861. She was married to Mr. Seitz in 1890, and they have since lived in Brooklyn, where she was prominent in affairs.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two daughters, Miss Mildred Seitz and Mrs. E. M. Gehl of Glen Tish, China.

LOWELL YOUNG MEN IN HAVERHILL COURT

Six Lowell young men were involved in an automobile accident in the Ward Hill section of Haverhill Sunday evening, and as a result five of them were arrested in the Central district court of that city yesterday morning. Edward B. Melloy of Corbett street, at- tacked owner and operator of the car, was charged with drunkenness and operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to 11 Aug. 15.

Fines of $10 each were imposed on Sylvester J. Harris of Fay street, Frank J. Mcneaney of Gorham street, George Mitchell of Wood street, and Albert O'Brien of Haverhill street, all charged with being drunk. The sixth member of the party, Geo. W. O'Hare, is confined to a Haverhill hospital with minor injuries. He was the only member of the party who was not intoxicated, police said. His injuries are not considered serious.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 5.—The 27th international miners' congress opened here yesterday. After the preliminary formalities, the secretary of the Amsterdam trades union reported on emigration to the United States, wage and working conditions in Europe and Asia, and the problem of the "eight-hour day."

At the afternoon session a resolution concerning a uniform minimum wage and working day was submitted to the congress. American delegate Kennedy and a number of others announced that the resolution was supported by their organizations.

do their own police work is somewhat open to criticism. The matter having been brought to public attention so forcibly of late it is certain to be one of the important subjects of consideration for next year's general court. If that body sees fit to make more stringent laws relating to the carrying of firearms the number of permits is likely to be greatly reduced in 1925.

DRY OFFICIAL ORDERS LIQUOR RETURNED

NEW YORK, August 5—Prohibition Director Merrick yesterday ordered immediately returned to Hugo Gilbert de Fritsch 100 cases of wines and liquors, seized in his East 54th street home last week in a raid by prohibition enforcement agents.

A federal inquiry has been started to determine the steps leading up to the raid on the home of Mr. de Fritsch, whose wife is said to be a niece by marriage of Chief Justice Taft. It has been charged that the prohibition agents obtained a warrant to search the de Fritsch home on false representations.

OLD AGE PENSION UNCONSTITUTIONAL

HARRISBURG, Penn., August 5.—An act passed by the Pennsylvania legislature a year ago, providing pensions for aged and indigent persons, was declared unconstitutional yesterday. Phil Payton Allows But Two Hits in City Twilight League Game—Dickerson Hits Homer—Schedule of Games Revised

With Phil Payton twirling big league ball and entire East End team lacing the leather for twirling blows, the Butlers of the City Twilight league were forced to swallow a bitter 10-0 whitewash on the South common last night. Payton, in allowing the opposition but two scratch hits, one of them an infield clout, pitched the best game of his career. Making a slow underhand ball with a series of fast-breaking curves, Payton had the doughy Butlers fairly eating out of his hand and should have been credited with a no-hit, no-run game.

Bill Crossland's East Ends gave a perfect exhibition of the national pastime. They displayed a fighting spirit from the first inning until Umpire Orrie Allen called play in the sixth because of impending darkness. Dickerson, with three hits to his credit, led the hitters, who got to "Duke" Carroll after the fourth stanza and did much damage to his southpaw service. Golden and Dowd connected for doubles, Beltencourt came through with a triple and Dickerson went him one better by clouting the sphere to deep left center for a homer. All the East End hits were of the clean variety.

For three innings nary a rally came to pass and the fans sat back to witness what gave every indication of being a tight struggle. As the East Ends and Butlers were in a triple tie for fourth place in the league standing, they were to give their all to break it. As a result neither team took any chances in the first few innings, but the East Ends broke the tie in the fourth and put two runners across the plate. Dickerson started activities with a single to center and pilfered second. Golden then followed with a double to the right field cliff and Dick rounded the paths. Golden registered on Dowd's two sac'er to right.

In the following inning, six big runs for the East Ends put the game on the proverbial ice. All kinds of bingles greeted Carroll in this session. A couple of free passes were thrown in for good measure and when the inning was concluded, a sextet of markers were on the score board. Meanwhile, Payton continued to hold the Butlers at bay and was getting away with one hit until the state when a scratch down the third base alley gave them one more. Dickerson injected his mighty homer in the sixth with a man on base, and it was all over. The score:

EMERALDS DEFEATED BY P. A. A. DEFEAT DIXONS THE VICTORIAS

With two regulars out the Emeralds lost to the Victorias, 6 to 1, on the North common last evening. The victors gathered the benefit of the breaks and of the five errors made by the boys in green. The feature of the game was the long slam for a round ticket made by White.

ans deserve great credit for holding their opponents to such a low score, and only for poor bunting, concealing at third in the final inning, would have tied up the count. Fast base running by Twelvey was responsible for the lone run scored by the winners. Birkenhead caught for the Victorias and the Emeralds had the best of the hitting featured. "Kid" Dixon was Pearson's battery mate and he gave a good account of himself.

THE CRESCENTS OF WOBURN DEFEATED

The Crescents of Woburn were defeated by the state infirmity team of Tewksbury by a 7 to 1 score at Tewksbury Saturday. "Mickey" Gibbons, former high school star, worked on the mound for the winners and had 12 strikeouts.

WEST GROTON TEAM DEFEATS LEOMINSTER

The Leominster A.A. met its worst defeat of the season last Saturday when the H. and V.A.A. of West Groton walked away with an 11 to 5 win. Mgr. Pickford's pitching ace, Hancock, was driven from the mound in the first inning when the H. and V. heavy artillery, consisting of O'Neill, Woodson, Smith and Driscoll got to the bog moundman for a series of serious clouts. Plouffe succeeded him on the rubber and got away nicely until the fifth when Cleary, Galt and the other Babe Ruths of the H. and V. again began slugging them to all corners of the lot.

Going at top speed, the Abbot boys loom up as a dangerous contender for the second-half honors, and if they continue at the present pace, they will get into the post-season series with the Lawrence Independents, winners of the first half. What could be sweeter?

DETROIT TIGERS BUY O'ROURKE

DETROIT, Aug. 5.—Frank O'Rourke, shortstop of the Toronto International League club, has been purchased by Detroit and it is expected he will report here in time for today's game. The purchase price was withheld. President Navin said O'Rourke would be used as utility infielder.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PENNANT RACE ONE OF THE BEST IN YEARS

Yanks, Tigers, Senators and Browns in Free-for-All in First Division—Only Ten Games Between Fourth Place and Cellar

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—As the Yankees again bounded to the fore through their defeat yesterday of the Tigers, the Browns advanced to within three games and a half of the Senators. The Yanks today had the field by one game and Detroit in second place distances Washington by half a game. Between the fourth-place Browns and the last-place Athletics only ten games intervene. Launching one of the late inning rallies which they are famous, the Yankees forged to the front in the 8th, were tied by the Jungle cats in the 9th and ultimately won by a score of 9 to 8 in the 11th. Ruth's 34th homer was the headline performance.

St. Louis made it two straight over Washington and six wins in 7 starts by capturing the second game of the series 5 to 1. Wingard pitched in his usual invincible form. After getting rid of all the poor pitching in his system in the first inning, Messenger, Cleveland's recruit from Saginaw, Michigan, recuperated and held Boston safe while his team was hammered out a 14 to 5 victory.

RAY SCHALK, BRILLIANT WHITE SOX CATCHER, BREAKS DOWN

For 11 Consecutive Years He Has Caught 100 or More Games—Series of Injuries Spoil Chance of Stretching Record to An Even Dozen

BY BILLY EVANS
Ray Schalk, brilliant catcher of the Chicago White Sox, is apparently to be denied a certain goal that he had set.

For 11 consecutive years, Schalk has caught 100 or more games. He hoped to stretch the record to an even dozen, then rest on his laurels. However, a series of injuries have practically killed his chance.

Schalk has passed the peak of his game. Years of hard work have taken their toll. The wonder catcher of the White Sox admits it.

"I guess 100 games is a little too much for me now," says Ray, "but if I ever get my hands in good shape again there is no telling what I might be able to do."

At present Schalk is playing with three badly injured fingers on his throwing hand. Most catchers wouldn't even don a uniform under the circumstances. Schalk loves the game. Perhaps that is a measure of his pluck and greatness that he has attained.

Glutton for Work
While far from being husky, Schalk is built on sturdy lines. One would never expect a player of his physique to stand up under 11 years of hard service, in which he caught from 1913 to 1923.

From 1912 to 1924 Schalk has taken part in 144 games, an average of some 131 games per season over a period of 11 years. The big league schedules call for 154 games. This will give some idea of how little the rest of the White Sox catching staff has had to do over that stretch of play.

Schalk's record of 11 consecutive years, in which he caught more than 100 games each season, is more than double the best National league performance, five years by Chief Myers when with the New York Giants.

Most Unusual Career
Schalk's career in the American league fairly teems with brilliant performances. The feat that pleases him most is that he has made a put-out at every base in the infield, quite unusual for a catcher.

Schalk has never again caught 100 games during a major league season, he is far from being through as a catcher, still is one of the most valuable in the majors.

As a matter of fact, there will probably be a place for Schalk in baseball as long as he cares to stick to the game. His knowledge of the catching game makes him invaluable to a club in its development of pitchers.

Always noted as a smart player, the managerial field is open to him, should he care to take a whirl at directing a club.

Catchers of the Schalk type come about once in a score of years.

What has become of the fast ball? Ed Walsh, once the greatest pitcher that ever stepped on the rubber, recently made that remark to me.

"In the old days the fast ball was the most used of all deliveries," continued Walsh, "yet the other day in a pitchers' battle between two major league clubs I don't believe either pitcher threw over a fast ball."

Walsh believes that pitchers are making a vital mistake in passing up the use of the fast ball for the new-fangled curve.

Incidentally he blames the freak styles for the lack of control that is now the prevailing fault of most pitchers.

The former White Sox star ridicules the generally accepted belief that fast-ball pitching would be soft for the batter with the live ball now in use.

Cy Young, whose record of 500 major league victories will probably never be equaled, expressed a similar opinion to that of Walsh's in a recent discussion of pitchers past and present.

Young achieved fame largely through the use of a fast ball. It was his best asset.

The freak deliveries, such as the knuckle ball and others of that type, were unknown to Young. He had a fair share of little or no change of pace ball, plenty of "twit" on his fast one.

Depending almost entirely on the fast ball with the curve mixed in occasionally, Young was able to establish many pitching records.

Most of the other great pitchers of the past and present depended largely on the fast ball. Walter Johnson, for instance.

A fast ball pitcher at present are passing it up to a great extent.

Y. d. Walsh and Cy Young, I am of the opinion that the game would be helped by a revival of fast ball pitching. It is a colorful style, carries a punch.

The fast ball pitcher with the home-run wallop.

TICKER PUTS PAL MOORE DOWN FOR COUNT

BY JOE WILLIAMS

Pal Moore used to swing an irritating mitten in the ring. Few of the boys could take him. Particularly was he poison to the champions. Williams, Erle, Herman and Lynch, all were pasted by the Memphis freak—a thin, scrawny atom who violated all the orthodox principles of pugilism.

Moore was popular and industrious and while he never fought for the title in a decision match, with a few purses involved, he was capably managed and made a lot of money.

The business flourished spectacularly. Moore's investment was soon worth $100,000. Later it soared to $200,000. At the height of his skill and at a time when the ring was paying its biggest dividends the hantam-weight stepped down. "Why work for a paltry $2000 when you can make a real fortune doing nothing?"

Moore hasn't fought for a year or so. Mostly he has been motoring through the country and making professional visits to stock brokers. I ran across him the other day up in small Michigan city. He didn't look much like the "millionaire fighter" I had been reading about.

"I'm looking for Promoter Sound-Son," Moore explained. "He owes me $500. In about the same breath he added, 'You can write a nice story for your paper, too, about me steering a comeback. I've started training already, and I'm going after this guy Goldstein. They tell me he's a bum. Is he?'"

It was strange chatter, coming from a fighter who had cleaned up sufficiently in stocks to retire when he was still good enough to whip the champions. By now you have surmised the answer. Moore's winnings and savings have gone the way most marksmen's do.

A sudden, mercenary change developed in the situation and overnight almost Moore was wiped out. Now he has gone back to the gloves. Maybe he is still good enough to beat the champions. But he'll never be good enough to beat the stock markets.

TICKETS FOR THE HARVARD GAMES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 5.—Harvard athletic officials will allot tickets for the Holy Cross, Dartmouth, Princeton, Brown and Yale games this fall. It was announced today, and applications will be necessary to get reserved seats. The Crimson will have about 32,000 seats in the Yale Road for the big game of the season, and graduates of the professional schools will be given privileges equal to those of college graduates in provision for two seats each.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

All Cardinals are requested to report on grounds not later than six o'clock for a scheduled game with the Mysteries of Centralville.

THREE INJURED IN CAR CRASH

BOSTON, August 5.—Three persons were injured, none seriously, at 5:30 last night, when an Eastern Massachusetts Street railway car collided with a Bunker Hill line car at the North station, at the top of the incline into the subway. Both cars were inbound.

It was said by Elevated officials that the accident was caused by the failure to hold the brakes of the Eastern Massachusetts car. A few panes of glass were broken, but neither car was seriously damaged.

William Clark, 40, single, of 207 West Third street, South Boston, was taken to the Relief hospital suffering from contusions of the back and hips. She was kept for treatment.

Edward J. Cuddy, 31, married, of 180 Washington street, Dedham, walked to the hospital where he was treated for contusions of the back.

Frank Lee, 34, married, of 53 Lowell street, was treated at the hospital for contusions of the back. He then went home.

FRANCE TO COMPETE FOR DAVIS CUP

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The 1924 European zone competition for the Davis cup, French amateur tennis team trophy, ended at Evans-Les-Bains yesterday with France again victorious. Cochet, Lacoste and Brugnon were the winners.

Czechoslovakians who had survived in the lower half of the draw, taking both the singles matches played Sunday and the doubles match yesterday with comparative ease. The two remaining singles are being played today, but they have no bearing on the results.

France thus earns the right to meet the winner in the American zone competition which is now under way, and the survivor of that will enter the challenge round against the United States for the cup.

AL MELLO IS DUE HOME THIS EVENING

AL MELLO, Lowell's 147-pound milt-artist, is due to reach American soil today. The S.S. America, on which he sailed from France with his manager, John Souza, was scheduled to dock in New York this noon, and Mello and Souza are expected in Lowell tonight.

The Tabor club, of which both are prominent members, have planned on a rousing reception to their Olympic representatives. Although no definite word concerning Raymond F. Dowd, Sun correspondent, has been received, he is thought to be in a passenger on the same boat.

JUNIOR TWILIGHT LEAGUE

A game between the Buffaloes and the Pawtucket Blues is scheduled for tonight on the North common. Game begins promptly at 8:15.

TO PREVENT SPREAD OF NEW INSECT PEST

WASHINGTON, August 5.—Quarantining Massachusetts, to prevent the spread of a new insect pest, the Oriental, or bag moth, now prevalent in the eastern part of the state, was considered at a public hearing held today by the federal horticultural board of the United States department of agriculture.

The Oriental moth was first discovered in this country in a section of Boston in February, 1906, having probably come here from Japan in a shipment of nursery stock, before the federal plant quarantine law was enacted. The moth has a wide distribution in the Orient and government entomologists believe that it could thrive throughout the United States with the possible exception of the peninsula of Florida.

The larvae, or caterpillars, feed on a variety of trees, and in some instances have caused the defoliation of Norway and sycamore maples, black and gray birches, buckthorn, choke cherry, apple, pear and plum trees. Wild cherry, huckleberry, black and red oak, hickory and sugar maple are reported to have been partly defoliated.

In addition to the injury caused by their feeding, these caterpillars have netting hairs that cause painful irritation on the human skin. The distribution of the moth in the United States is now confined, as far as known, to eastern Massachusetts, specimens having been collected at Nahant, Saugus, Winthrop, East Boston, South Boston, Dorchester, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, Cambridge, Milton and Quincy.

A federal quarantine would restrict the movement of articles likely to carry the pest into other states.

The city council committee on Central bridge met yesterday and framed a report which will be made at tonight's session of the city council. The relation to the body as to whether the present bridge should be repaired or replaced but gives costs of repair and of replacement by two other type bridges, together with the cost of erection of a temporary foot bridge at a point near St. John's hospital to be used should the present bridge be closed.

The figures as presented estimate that the present 55-foot bridge could be repaired for $54,000 or a new 55-foot bridge built in eight months for $534,000. All prices are exclusive of the cost of providing roadway facilities, such as rails, overhead wiring and such.

The committee decided to recommend to the council that an expert of known reputation be engaged to make a study of the matter and give his professional opinion as to whether a new bridge should replace the present one or the present one be repaired.

BOARD OF HEALTH HOLDS ROUTINE MEETING

The board of health held a routine meeting at city hall last evening. Dennis Murphy presented a petition of one Joseph Krygowski to use land situated at the corner of Cunningham street and Boston road as a burial place for the Polish Catholic people of Lowell. The land in question is bounded on the north by Cunningham street, on the south by property of Mary A. Manning or heirs, on the east by Boston road, and west by property of Curtis and Anne McEwan. A public hearing on the petition will be held next Monday to show cause as to why the petition should be granted.

L. E. McDuffie petitioned the right to keep cows for sale at a stable on his property at 39 Fulton street. Mr. McDuffie was not present at the meeting. After due consideration the board voted to grant Mr. McDuffie leave to withdraw. The secretary was instructed to so inform the petitioner.

The following letter was sent out by the department of public health of the commonwealth regarding the spread and prevention of infantile paralysis: Infantile paralysis (anterior poliomyelitis) is one of the few infectious diseases in which the mode of transmission is still unknown. Consequently we are unable to take effective measures to prevent its spread.

Experience in Massachusetts has not borne out the assertion made elsewhere, that the disease is more prevalent in the country than in the city. Outbreaks may occur either in the city or the country.

For the past three years the number of cases reported in the state has remained fairly constant. For the current year the number of cases reported to date is only slightly in excess of last year (34 last year, 41 this year). The disease is distinctly more prevalent during the summer months than in the rest of the year.

Patients with infantile paralysis should be isolated in the acute stages of the disease in much the same way that we isolate a typhoid patient. They should be protected against visitors and against insects and flies, mosquitoes, etc. They should have separate dishes and silver which are scalded after use. The body discharges should be disinfected as in typhoid.

There is no evidence that regulations against the congregation of persons, such as might be used in the case of an epidemic of a disease spread by the upper respiratory tract, have had any influence in controlling infantile paralysis. This would be of secondary cases in a family is considered.

CONCERT AT COMMON

The 88th Field Artillery Band, Organized Reserves, provided the concert on the South common last night and nearly 10,000 persons turned out to hear the municipal music program provided.

(Special to The Sun.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Massachusetts' plans for entertaining the world circling American aviators when they reach Boston later this month will have to be abandoned, according to a statement issued from the war department. Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commandant of the world flight, has requested that there will be no entertainment until after the Pacific coast is reached and the flight around the world is finished in order that the journey across the United States may be made as rapidly as possible.

The war department will respect Lieut. Smith's wishes; plans for a formal entertainment of the fliers here with the president and other high officials participating, have been given up, and in the statement given out yesterday, the war department urges that its example be followed during the transcontinental flight.

After rest period following the finish of the flight, the aviators and their planes will be allowed to go to a number of cities in the United States, probably including Boston.

The war department statement, with a caption reading "No Delay for Entertainment," was as follows: "The chief of air service has received a cablegram from Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commandant of the world flight, in which he urgently requests that no entertainment be arranged until after the Pacific coast is reached and the journey around the world is entirely completed. This recommendation is made in order that the flight across the United States may be made as rapidly as possible, to minimize the chances of failure on this last part of the route and prevent the personnel from relaxing their efforts before their task is done. On their way around the world, Lieut. Smith and his companions have had to decline many offers of entertainment in the countries through which they have passed and have endeavored to avoid any unnecessary delay.

"The great interest aroused by this flight and the pride all Americans feel in the measure of accomplishment already attained have prompted many invitations for them to stop on their way across the United States and it is known that at the places where stops must necessarily be made, tentative plans for the entertainment of the fliers have been prepared. Lieut. Smith, however, expresses very clearly the attitude of himself and of his companions. They are very grateful to their countrymen for the welcome they have proposed to accord them, but they feel that it is their duty to complete the task they have undertaken and that nothing should interfere with its prompt accomplishment.

"Prior to the receipt of this message and recommendation from Lieut. Smith, it had been planned to entertain them in Washington and it was hoped that the president, members of his cabinet and other prominent officials would participate. "Gen. Patrick, the chief of air service, promptly communicated to the war department this communication of Lieut. Smith and it has been de-

PARIS SUICIDE VICTIM WAS SPRINGFIELD MAN

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The American who ended his life yesterday in a Paris hotel was identified today by the American consulate as Samuel Burnham Chapin, aged 24, of Springfield, Mass., where his mother, Mrs. W. H. Chapin, lives.

Through the misreading of scribbled addresses on the back of an envelope he was yesterday erroneously identified as S. H. Chapin of San Francisco. The young man, who had recently acted strangely, cut his throat and wrist with a safety razor blade. Police investigation disclosed that he had abundant funds.

PRE-WEDDING SHOWER

Miss Mary Fallon was recently tendered a shower at the home of her brother, Fred Fallon in Groton road, North Chelmsford. Miss Fallon who is soon to become the bride of William P. Sullivan of Falmouth, was presented numerous gifts of silverware, cut glass and linen. In addition to these, the young lady was the recipient of a handsome dinner set, the gift of her friends in the Ipswich hospital. A fine musical program, including vocal and instrumental selections was given. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable time was had by all.

The following program was given on the Greenhalge school playground yesterday afternoon:

OLD JEWELRY

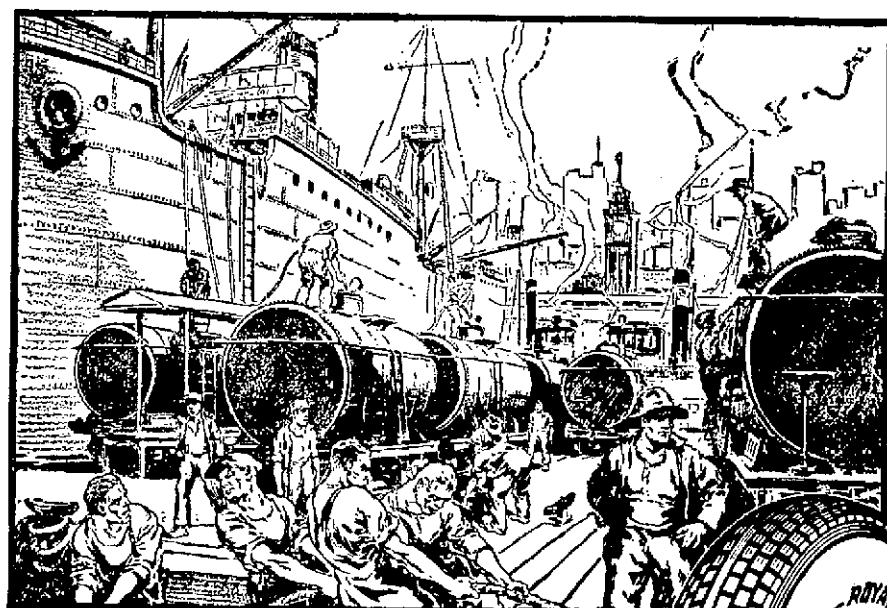

Antique jewelry is very popular now. Old gold and silver necklaces are remounted with semi-precious stones and the effect is very barbaric and splendid.

It is earnestly hoped that the other places where the flight must stop on its way across the United States will follow this example and will accede to the expressed wish of the fliers themselves and omit formal entertainments and other features which might imperil the success of the undertaking now so nearly accomplished.

"After the circuit of the world is completed and the fliers have had a deserved period of rest, it is the intention to send some or all of them and their planes to a number of cities which have expressed their interest in the flight. Then, with their task accomplished, there will be more time for the fliers to meet with those who wish show their appreciation.

What Latex means to U.S. Balloon Tires

NOTICE a balloon tire flatten under the weight of the car and you realize how great a responsibility for combined flexibility and strength low air-pressure construction throws on the tire manufacturer.

When the balloon tire was first being considered the makers of U.S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires had already developed the Latex Process—and patented it.

They had the supply of latex—liquid raw rubber—on their own plantations—and the methods for bringing it to this country. So U.S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires are built of Latex-treated cords—and have strength and flexibility obtainable by no other method.

Combined with longer service, U.S. Royal Cord Balloon Tires have the advantages of accurate balance and a tread scientifically designed for low air-pressure.

Consequently their tractive and anti-skid qualities meet every requirement of safety and ease in handling at all speeds.

Jack Daw's Adventures. Chapter 14

Jack then noticed that the man Eskimo carried a long spear. He asked one of the sailors what it was for. "Oh, they use that to spear fish with," replied the sailor. He then took the spear from the Eskimo and handed it to Jack. "Do you think you could do some spearing, yourself?" he asked.

"I don't know, but I'd like to try," replied the little adventurer. Then the sailor said something to the Eskimo and, motioning for Jack and the sailors to follow, the Eskimo started off across the ice. Jack had removed his skates and he found it very hard to walk. Suddenly he slipped down.

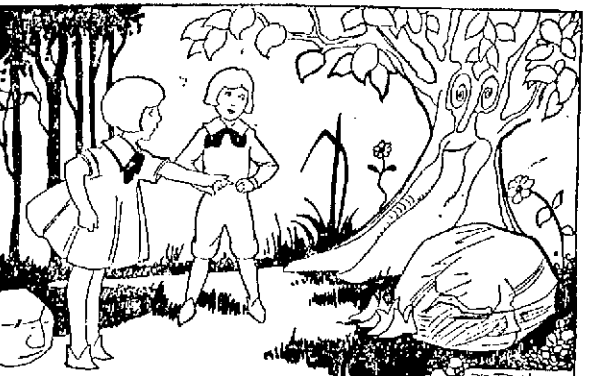

"Would you rather ride on an ice sled?" asked one of the sailors. "Sure I would," laughed Jack. And in a very short time the Eskimo father had brought forward a long low sled. Two dogs were hitched to it and Jack was told to sit down. He climbed aboard and tucked a fur piece around him. (Continued.)

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

AND THERE, SURE ENOUGH, WERE THE MAGIC GREEN SHOES

"I wonder if the Fairy Queen will send us on another adventure," said Nancy to Nick, as they ran down to the meadow to play.

"Let's look beside the stone under the chestnut tree," said Nick. And there, sure enough, were the magic green shoes, and beside them a letter. The letter said:

"Dear Twins: You have been such good children that I thought you would like to go on a vacation. My good friend, Weeny, the elephant, is going to take a trip around the world, and if you like you may take the magic shoes and go with him."

"Weeny lives in the jungle and if you put on your magic shoes they will take you to him at once."

"I hope that you will have a nice time and that you will see many interesting things."

"Lovingly yours, 'The Fairy Queen'."

"Hurrah!" cried Nick. "Goodbye!" cried Nancy. And into the magic shoes they jumped in a hurry.

Puff, whizz, swift! Away they went through the air like two little comets, until they came to the jungle.

And there was Weeny packing his entel.

"Hello!" he called. "I thought you would be here soon. The Fairy Queen told me to expect you. Did you bring any peanuts along?"

"No never thought of them," said Nancy, regretfully.

"Well, never mind. It's too late now," said Weeny. "Besides, most likely we'll run into a peanut tree."

"Peanuts don't grow on trees," said Nick.

"No, I guess they grow in paper bags," said Weeny. "There! I'm all packed now. I'm not taking much. Only a nightgown and a toothbrush and my specks. Hop on my back now and please hold my saddle. I don't think I forgot anything."

"Now it is no small matter to hop on a elephant, but if you have magic shoes you can hop to the moon, so up jumped the Twins and off they started, all three of them on their vacation."

"I think I'll visit my circus friends," said Weeny. "It's far cheaper to visit friends than to go to hotels."

"Oh, were you ever in a circus?" asked Nick.

"Sure," said Weeny. "That's what elephants are for."

"Then why aren't you still?" asked Nancy.

"I don't like to be scrubbed with a broom like an old carpet," said Weeny. "So I ran off."

"If you go back to the circus to visit your friends, you'll have to stay," said Nick.

"Oh, my friends aren't in the circus any more," said Weeny as he trotted along. "There was a wreck on the railroad one night and they all got away and went home."

"How can you cross the sea?" asked Nick. "It's pretty wide."

BY STEPHEN HANNIGAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Another inclusion shattered. Yesterday I saw and heard a phonograph record made. I always thought it was necessary to conduct the operation in a padded cell-like, sound-proof room.

It isn't. The studio is in a duplex apartment building in 57th street. Lying above, beneath and adjoining are wealthy families. There is no furniture in the apartment and the room used for recording records—making the master—is the living room.

Through the open windows come the gas fumes of building traffic in the crowded street below. The noise of the street is drowned out by the "un-pa-pa" of brass instruments. The musicians have doffed coats and collars.

"There are three recording horns for her wand and I learned to fly with my ears," said Weeny. "I am also a good swimmer. I can go anywhere."

Executive Council Today
Scrutinizes Records of
Aspirants to Congress

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 5. (By the Associated Press).—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, whose endorsement of the La Follette-Wheeler candidacies and platform was accepted by the recipients yesterday, launched today into its announced campaign of participation in all national, state and local elections of 1924.

The council has picked its presidential and vice presidential favorites. Next it will scrutinize the records of aspirants to congress with a view to swinging the votes of labor to such republicans, democrats or independents as may have won the rating "friendly to labor."

This is the program for today and, possibly, tomorrow. The national non-partisan political campaign committee of the federation did not wait until its endorsement of La Follette and Wheeler was o.k'd by the council before beginning its survey of congressional material.

Samuel Gompers, president, and Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, have been at it for months with two of their vice presidents, James O'Connell and Matthew Wolf.

Members of the executive council announced this morning the expected from the committee, some time today, a report and recommendations concerning congressional candidates, "which would be of great public interest."

"We undoubtedly will ask that many of the senators and representatives whom we endorsed in the last campaign and who are now in office, be returned to Washington," said Mr. Wolf. "We also will ask to prevent the return to congress of certain candidates whom we helped to elect and who have failed to keep the faith with labor."

TO STUDY ARBITRATION MACHINERY IN CHICAGO

HAVERHILL, Mass., Aug. 5.—The shoe board of arbitration will suspend business August 8 until September 2. During this period Chairman Edwin Newdick of the board will visit Chicago for further study of the arbitration machinery of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Special attention will be given to the progress which the Amalgamated has made in the use of production standards.

Mr. Newdick will also study the Amalgamated union's plan of unemployment insurance which has been in operation in Chicago for more than a year. It is the belief of Mr. Newdick that the ill-effects of the depression which the Haverhill workers by lack of work is the worst of all hardships which they have to face.

BIG LIQUOR SEIZURE AT WILLOW DALE CAMP

Lowell and Tyngsboro police yesterday raided a camp at Willow Dale, seizing 800 gallons of alcohol, nearly 1000 empty bottles, spurious labels and counterfeit seals, sealing machines and various fixtures and furnishings. The confiscated goods were escorted by the Tyngsboro authorities, samples being sent to Boston for analysis. No arrests were made, but it is expected they will follow the analysis.

Participating in the raid were Sergt. Winn and Officers Keegan, Kilroy, Aldrich and Liston of the Lowell department. They were accompanied by Chief Pelletier of Tyngsboro.

GERMAN ENVOYS REACH LONDON

Handed Protocol Embodying
Program for Putting Dawes Report Into Effect

MacDonald Asks Germans to Study Report and Express
Opinion Tomorrow

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(By the Associated Press).—Premier MacDonald, presiding at a plenary session of the inter-allied conference at noon today, formally handed to the German delegation the protocol embodying the program of the conference for putting the Dawes reparation report into effect. He asked the Germans to study the report and be ready to express their opinions tomorrow. The premier said he wanted to bring the conference to an end by Friday night. The session which was held at the premier's official residence in Downing street, lasted but thirty minutes and was opened by a welcoming address delivered by Mr. MacDonald. The German delegates, headed by Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Finance Minister Luther, arrived in London at 8.30 a. m. prepared for the meeting, having familiarized themselves with the action of the conference committee while en route from Berlin. They were accompanied from Harwich by Dr. Gustave St. Hamer, the German ambassador in London.

Replying to Mr. MacDonald's welcome, Chancellor Marx said the German government had accepted the Dawes plan and was putting through the necessary legislation to make it effective. The German representatives, he said, hoped to maintain the friendly spirit of the original experts and hoped the allies would do the same. A large crowd of curious persons had assembled at the Liverpool street station to catch a glimpse of Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Finance Minister Luther. The delegates were greeted by representatives of the British foreign office and were whisked off immediately in taxicabs to the Ritz, where they will be the guests of the British government.

Upon their arrival in London the German delegates, through their spokesman, Herr Spinoer, said they wished to assist in finding the best method of putting the Dawes report into effect without change and in the spirit of its author and that they would contribute their part to its loyal fulfillment.

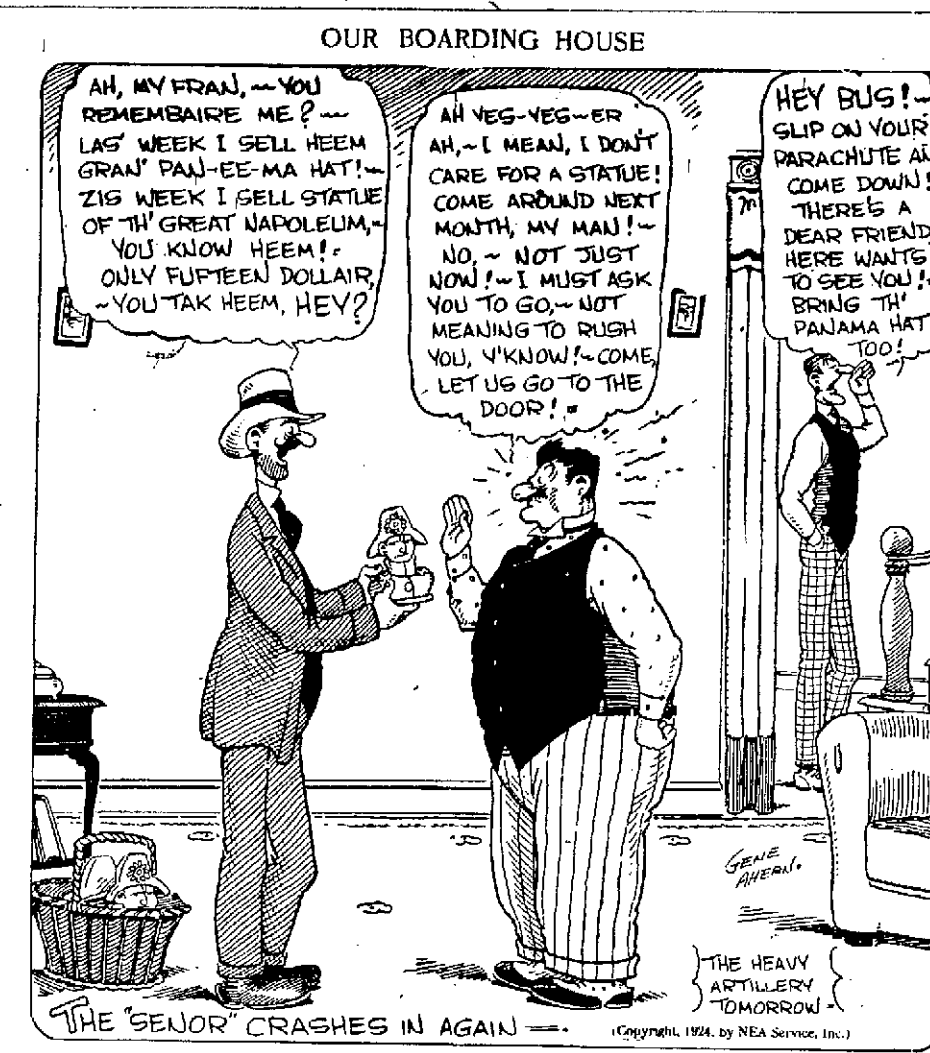

Spinoer expressed the hope that the same spirit would be found in London, in which event, he said, there should be no difficulty in coming to a speedy agreement.

CITY COUNCIL WILL HOLD BUSY MEETING TONIGHT

A great mass of routine business is awaiting transaction at the meeting of the city council to be held tonight. In addition action is looked for the request of Joseph M. Dineen that he be permitted to withdraw from consideration his nomination by the mayor, for city treasurer. John E. McNabb has been named by the mayor as the next nominee to oppose Fred H. Rourke and his application will be read at tonight's session.

In addition there is still tabled the nomination of Charles J. Landers to succeed Fisher H. Pearson, holdover member of the board of health. Action is likely to be attempted on this nomination, although it is doubtful if the nominee has the number of votes necessary for confirmation.

There will be no nomination to the board to succeed Joseph L. McGrath, holdover of two months, according to the mayor. The mayor does not feel inclined to act on this appointment until such time as the council is committed to record as his nomination for the city treasurer and the board of health.

LAUNDRY CONTINUED TO SEW SLEEVE ON MAN'S SHIRT

BROCKTON, Aug. 5.—The man living away from home appreciates mending service by laundries, usually. Merton L. C. McCrillis, president of a laundry company here, told fellow members of a luncheon club of one instance when it was not appreciated. For three weeks, the laundry sewed new sleeves on shirts that came in with one sleeve gone. Then they received a note of thanks, but with a request that the service be stopped. The writer explained he had only one arm.

INVESTIGATE ORIGIN OF FIRE IN LOCAL STORE

In an effort to determine whether a fire in a fruit store at 174 Broadway early in the morning of July 23 was of incendiary origin, a lengthy investigation was conducted today at fire headquarters by Deputy State Fire Marshal T. C. Murphy of Boston, assisted by Chief Edward P. Saunders. The inquiry got underway at 10 o'clock and was not concluded until 1.15 o'clock this afternoon. A number of witnesses were heard, including one Sokorellis, said to have been the store proprietor. The decision of the deputy marshal was reserved.

Immediately after the fire an investigation was made of the premises by Chief Saunders and Police Sergt. Bigelow and two men, smelling strongly of kerosene were found. Later further investigations were made by Police Inspector John J. Walsh and State Inspector Everett Shumway.

NEW SURETY FOR SOMERVILLE MEN

TO POSTPONE HOLY YEAR CELEBRATION

ROME, Aug. 5.—Postponement of the Holy Year celebration from 1925 to 1926 is not improbable, says the newspaper Sereno today, owing to delays in preparing for the Ecumenical council, in which more than 800 bishops from all parts of the world will participate. By a postponement for a year, the Holy Year will coincide with the centennial of St. Francis of Assisi, which will be celebrated in 1926.

OFFICER SENT TO STOP BOYS IN SWIM- MING, TAKES DIP

NORTH ANDOVER, Aug. 5.—The lure of the swimming hole attracts young and old, irresponsible boy and officer of the law, alike. When complaints came to police headquarters that boys were swimming in a favorite pool without clothing, Chief of Police Frederick J. Hawkes sent Officer Charles Ranney to stop them or see that they were properly clad. It was a hot day. The patrolman was gone a long time. Chief Hawkes decided to drop around to the pool himself and see how things were going. He found the policeman and the boys getting along well together. All were in the water, and all their clothes were on the bank. Chief Hawkes announced Officer Ranney's indefinite suspension today.

Lowell's Greek-speaking citizens flourishing in the Market street section of the city, far from becoming excited today as a result of the news relayed yesterday from Springfield, announcing the unroofing of Basilios Komnopolos of Lowell, as a bishop of the Greek Orthodox church, are quietly discussing the latest turn the so-called "church leadership controversy" has taken. There are loyal supporters of the degraded church leader and also many strong opponents in Lowell's Greek colony. All are outspoken and emphatic when expressing their sincere religious "loyalty" beliefs. To many, the unroofed bishop is now looked upon as an outcast from the Greek Orthodox church. His aspirations in trying to institute the "Independent Greek Orthodox Metropolis of America and Canada," and to act as spiritual leader, are roundly condemned. On the other hand, Basilios Komnopolos has numerous loyal supporters in Lowell, who are declared to be Greek "royalists." The bishop arrived in America about a year ago, and soon came to Lowell and made this city his headquarters. He still resides in the Highlands district, journeying back and forth between Lowell and other eastern seaboard cities where local followers gathered in support of the "Independent" church. In discussing the case of the unroofed bishop, Bishop Alexopoulos of Boston, whose diocese comprises all of New England and the eastern part of Canada said that the bishop had settled in Lowell, "where in assembling a few powerful supporters and attempted to extend his influence." Komnopolos has addressed Greek bodies in cities through the state and in other states, but according to Bishop Alexopoulos, "had not followed the tenets of his religion."

The decisive action of the Greek supreme ecclesiastical court was taken on May 16th, but the official notice was not served upon Bishop Komnopolos until last Friday night. He was located just before midnight in a room in a hotel in Springfield. In a statement issued last night in Springfield, the unroofed bishop declared that Bishop Alexopoulos "had no authority" over him, therefore "could not unroof" him. He declared that he resigned from his old position with the church in Greece and that since coming to America, he has been "an independent." He declares further, that he "will file a bill in equity to enjoin the bishop of Boston from carrying out the order of unroofing."

Bishop Komnopolos has an official document signed by the secretary of state of Massachusetts, wherein he is authorized to render the affairs of the "Independent" church. It was said today that the Independent

Three Men Suspected of
$15,000 P. O. Robbery
Seek Safety in Mine

Sheriffs Armed With Rifles
and Shotguns on Guard—
May Use Sulphur

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., Aug. 5.—All last night a number of deputy sheriffs, armed with rifles and shotguns, remained on guard outside the Pallade mine, in the hills back of this city, where three men suspected of having participated in the robbery of the Pallade postoffice Saturday night when $15,000 in cash and stamps was taken, have sought safety.

The mine entrance, high up on the mountain side, was illuminated by spotlights and the surrounding area was lighted by electric lights that had been strung during the day.

One of the three attempted a dash to liberty Sunday night, but a volley of shots drove him back. Two appeared at the mine entrance yesterday afternoon, but another volley forced them to retreat. They made no attempt to escape last night.

A plan to force chlorine gas into the mine to force the men out was abandoned because there are more than five miles of tunnels in the property and use of gas was not feasible.

"Fugitives: This is to offer you an opportunity to give yourselves up and come out without fear or harm. We will see that you get an even break and a fair trial. We do not want to use severe methods to force you out, but unless you come out we must do so. Come to the main entrance and shout."

"Jeff Watson, sheriff."

There is no water in the mine, and it is believed that the entrapped men have little or no food.

If the men refuse to surrender, guards plan to set fire to quantities of sulphur at several points within the mine.

St. Peter's Orphanage Outing

Major Donovan was the umpire. Bag races, potato races and games were among the many entertainment numbers on the program. Rides on the hobby-horses provided the thrill of the afternoon and it was with reluctance that the children left this centre.

All in all it was the most enjoyable outing in the annals of St. Peter's orphanage outings and it was a group of 125 first yet happy children which returned to the city.

The general committee in charge of the outing was as follows: Counselor James J. Hennessey, president of St. Peter's orphanage association; William A. Hogan, esq., Charles J. Landers, Hon. James B. Casey, Chief Edward H. Rourke, John Condon, William Daley, John V. Donohue, Fred H. Rourke, William McCarthy, David Burke, William Purcell, Arthur O'Connor, Charles Holmes, John Connor, John Barrett.

The following committee from the League of Catholic Women assisted in making the affair the pronounced success that it was. Chairman Dr. Emma T. Slaughter, president; Mrs. James R. O'Connor, Mrs. William Kearns, Mrs. John H. Connor, Mrs. Charles V. Holmes, Mrs. Joseph Green, Mrs. Edward W. Walsh, Mrs. James Casey, Mrs. Sarah Connelly, Mrs. Thomas Coleman, Mrs. F. Daley, Mrs. David Mahoney, Mrs. Fred A. Lamoureux, Mrs. John J. Regan, Mrs. Alcide Parent, Mrs. Edward P. Saunders, Mrs. B. J. Callahan, Mrs. Martin Maher, Mrs. William E. Rawlandson, Mrs. Jennie Rediker, Mrs. George Alford, Mrs. James Brown, and the Misses Julia Lamon, Genevieve Jantzen, Ellnor Knolan, Catherine McEvoy, Mabel Haggerty, Esther V. Green, Elizabeth and Adelaide Gorman, Nellie Mullane, Annie Mullen.

The following local concerns and patrons donated prizes which were awarded the competitors in the various games: A. G. Pollard, Dickerman & McQuade, Talbot Clothing Co., Mrs. Charles Holmes, John Connor, A. Rousseau.

Those giving the use of their cars for the outing were: Daniel Hogan, John J. Hogan, Fred H. Rourke, Judge Thomas J. Burkhart, John McDonough, Walter McKenna, William Rogers, Patrick O'Hara, John Crotter, James McManman, Mabel Haggerty, Mrs. McKay, John Sullivan, Fred Maloy, William Purcell, Philip Keen, Miss Mary Donovan, William Ryan, McCarty Brothers, Margaret Hennessey, John Connor, Charles Holmes, 2 cars; William Daley, Chief Edward P. Saunders, James B. Casey, John Rourke, Dr. James O'Connor, William A. Hogan, Patrick Cox, Michael Cassey and John Leahy.

$100,000 FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Trust Fund Left by Freeman
B. Shedd Released by Death of Widow

Fund Provides for Park Development—$700,000 For
Lowell General Hospital

Through the death yesterday of Mrs. Amy F. Shedd, widow of Freeman B. Shedd, the Lowell General hospital will receive $700,000 from a trust fund provided in Mr. Shedd's will and the city of Lowell will receive $100,000 for the further development of Shedd park. Of the $700,000 which will go to the hospital, $100,000 must be used for the erection of a building for the care of patients suffering with incurable diseases.

Under the will of Freeman Ballard Shedd, who died in 1913, a trust fund was created from the residue of his estate amounting to about $1,000,000. The trustees were Alois D. Sargent, Charles J. Wier and the late Mary Belle Shedd, who died a little over a year ago. The trustees were instructed under the will to pay to Mrs. Amy F. Shedd and to her daughter, Mary Belle Shedd, the income of the fund.

Upon the death of both of them, however, the will stated that the principal should be divided as follows: Berry school of Rome, Ga., $100,000; D. L. Moody school for girls at East Northfield, $100,000; City of Lowell, for the development of Shedd park, $100,000; Lowell General hospital, $700,000.

It is further stipulated in the will that the Shedd park development shall follow plans now in existence drawn by Ernest W. Bowditch and that the $100,000 shall be expended under his supervision or his successor or successors in business.

GET ALLEGED THIEVES AFTER HOT CHASE

Close "follow up" work on the part of Patrolmen Charles Sharkey, Miles Maloney and Police Chauffeur Charles C. Brown early this morning resulted in the arrest of three men charged with the larceny of an automobile tire from the vicinity of Hanks and Huntington streets. The three officers mentioned above made a hurried visit to the scene in a police automobile and when they neared the locality in question, the driver of the suspected car failed to stop when signalled to do so. Instead, he headed the car into the street, the officers and then sped away. On Huntington street, the fugitive machine was overtaken and here the occupants threw an automobile tire into the street. Continuing to High and Oak streets, they were finally forced to give in at gun-points. One of the suspects landed an attack on Officer Brown and later apologized, saying he did not know he was a police officer.

The three were taken to the station and booked on a charge of larceny. Kaplan was also charged with operating without lights, and in district court this morning, each of the defendants was continued in $300 until Saturday.

Members of the republican town committee of the eighth representative and eighth senatorial districts, have been called to meet at Westford town hall, tomorrow evening, to perfect plans for the annual "G.O.P. muster" and field day, to be held on Westford common, Aug. 23.

The day's program of entertainment will include a band concert, midday ball games, sports and dances. Familiar orators of the republican party faith, will be present to speak during the afternoon. Herbert Burbank of the republican state committee, will attend the special business meeting to be held in town hall tomorrow night.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE IS DISMISSED

In district court today, Emory E. Holt, driver of the automobile which collided with another machine at Cleburne's corner in Tewksbury on July 16, was exonerated of a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Ada L. MacDonald, one of the occupants of the machine who died as the result of injuries sustained in the crash. Judge Pickman, who conducted an inquest some time ago, finds that death was not due to the criminal negligence of the defendant.

NEW SURETY FOR SOMERVILLE MEN

New surety for Anthony Ingenito and Nicholas DeCampa of Somerville was taken this forenoon by United States Commissioner Richard B. Walsh. Each man now is held in bonds of $1000 for hearing before the commissioner on Sept. 15.
